Marrying in Haste-It is the old story over again that comes by telegraph from Scrantonmarrying a stranger in haste "to re pent at leisure"—to the effect that "Miss Caroline Clyde, of the village of Stoddardsville, was the oldest of three spinster sisters and a bachelor brother. Their parents died many years ago and left them in fairly com-fortable circumstances, and the four lived together and held the property in common. All the children had been well educated. Each of the young women had chances to marry, but the suitors did not come up to their ideas of what a husband should be intellectually and so the intelligent girls grew to be old maids. They were independent, yet sociable and neighborly, and they had many friends among the villagers. Twenty-five years ago the youngest sister died, and left her share of the property to the two remaining girls. Ten years later the brother passed away. He had accumulated a few thousand dollars, which he willed to his two sisters. In side of three years the younger sister died, Miss Clyde was alone in the world. Besides the house and lot she had between $8,000 and $10,000 in their ideas of what a husband should had between $8,000 and $10,000 in good securities. For twelve years Miss Clyde and a solitary female servant occupied the old homestead. Last summer a young Englishman, who said his name was Arthur Farrington, took up his abode in the village. He pretended to be very pious, attended the same church that Miss Clyde did, formed her acquaintance in a short time, and soon began to make love to time, and soon began to make love to her. Miss Clyde was then 61 years old, and her young lover only 27. The elderly maiden was greatly flattered by Farrington's declarations of love. She told some of the neighboring women that she had never supposed before that a man could possibly think as much of a woman as Farrington thought of her, and the neighboring women told her not to believe all the fellow said. But Miss Clyde did be-lieve him, and during the boliday scason last winter she was quietly married to her young English lover. 'The honeymoon was passed in the old Clyde homestead, and then Mr. Arthur Farrington made a trip to New York alone. He stayed there for nearly a week, when he returned home and remained a fortnight. During the next two months he made a number of journeys to the metropolis, and the villagers wondered what he was up to. To an inquisitive neighbor Mrs. rington confided the fact that her husband had taken all her securities and was going to double them in value before the end of the year, and when they had got $20,000 they intended to sell the old home and move to a larger town. Along in May Mr. Farrington sold the house and lot and got the cash for it, and with his wife's consent he started to look for a new home somewhere on the Hudson. He was to be back inside of a week, but his aged wife has not seen him from that day to this. Five weeks after his departure Mrs. Farrington received a letter from her rascally young husband. It was postmarked Liverpool, and in it he thanked her for giving him a start in the world, hoped she wouldn't cry about it, trusted some one would take good are of her said. one would take good care of her and said he should never cross the ocean again. The deceived woman had less than $50 when Farrington left her, and she has gone to live with some relatives in Central New York."

New York as a Horse Market

upon as the great mart for blooded equines, and instead of colts and fillies being displayed, as of yore, in their ancestral paddocks they are transported to that city and exhibited in the American Institute building. The dangers of travel are more than offset by the larger attendance of rich buyers secured in the metropolis and the consequent increase in prices obtained. The smallest man and the shrewdest inspector of horses at some of the sales of last spring was Robert Steel, of Philadelphia, the introducer of the Happy Medium strain into the trotting blood of the United States and one of the first men to largely engage as a business in the breeding of fast trot-

As he looked with kindling eyes upon the glossy skins of the youngsters being paraded before him on one occasion he said: "How marvelous has been the improvement in our trot-ting horses within the last ten years and, more wonderful still, with breed ers increasing in numbers and conse quently fast horses also, the prices of good horses have grown enormously. Less than ten years ago a brood mare which brought $1,500 was a phenomenal animal and the announcement of such figures astounded people. Now such horses range in price from $1,000 to $15,000, and a man who possesses a mare one of whose progany has made a great record owns enough to support him unless his idea of living are extraordinarily tavish.

"Why is it that the price of blooded horse fish has increased so rapidly? There are two chief reasons. The first is that horses to day, as a result of trainers and owing to constant experiments in crossing strains, are finer bred than ever before in the history of the world, so that from the expression of twenty years ago, 2:40 on a plank road, being an expression of super-lative swiftness we have come now to a condition of equine affairs in which if a mans every day roadster cannot trot down in the twenties he is sneered at by the drivers he brashes with upon the road.

"The second reason is that men who drive horses for pleasure keep more now than they did ten years ago. Then few men who enjoyed this most delightful pastime kept more than one horse, but they found that a lameness to-day and a soreness to morrow and a cough the next week doomed them to frequent disappointments, and so now gentlemen drivers who can afford the luxury rarely keep less than three

Oheap Footgear-

It is not to be wondered at that people buy cheap shoes. They re-semble so closely the higher priced ones, both in form and apparent qual-ity, that the masses are led to believe that they are as good as they look. Made on the same graceful lasts, fin-ished apparently faultlessly, lustrous and shapely, they are disappointingly deceitful. Many women buyers are far more exacting in the matter of a scrupulous fit, by which the foot is made to look neat and trim, than they are about quality. A shoe that wil make a woman proud of the foot which it covers, though only simula-tion of solid worth, is in some measure an atonement for the wreck which speedily follows the wearing of it.-

A Printer Candidate For Governor.

The Democratic nominee for governor of South Dakota, Hon. Maris Taylor, is a native of Pennsylvania, having been born in Chester county, that state, July 6, 1847. When 20 years old he became a resident, of Dakota, settling at Yankton, where he was employed first as a printer and afterward as editor of the Dakota Herald. In 1885 he severed his connection with the Herald to accept the office of surveyor general of the territory, to which he was appointed by the president, and which he held four years. In 1889 he represented Beadle county in the lower house of the legislature. He was nominated or governor by acclamation.

Familiarities of Young Girls

There is very little left to call the people you love if you lavish words of affection on every stranger whom you meet. If you call a young woman who you have just met half an hour "dear," and one whom you have known three days "daring," there will be no tender endearing term for you to address to those who have your whole heart. Girls who are not of necessity gushing, are often apt to speak in the most familiar manner. Good speech is certainly pure silver, but there are so many times when silence would outweigh it and be perfect gold. To tell of one's family affairs, to tell of ones joys and worries to some one who has a sympathetic manner and seems to invite it, is at once a weakness and a misfortune. To write a letter in which you use endearing terms, in which you discuss personal matters, is more than merely indiscreet -it is dangerous. Don't you think if you are a bit familiar in speech or with the pen to a man, that he is with the pen to a man, that he is going to more than meet this half way? Don't you think if you call him by his first name he is very apt to call you by yours, and perhaps before people who you do not care to have think lightly of you? If you permit him to speak of things not usually discussed, do not imagine for one moment his more than the permit him to speak of things not usually discussed, do not imagine for one more than the permit him to speak of things not usually discussed. and McKinleys would read him out of party. Listen to the colonel:

"I believe in protecting what are called the infant industries, but after these "infants" get six feet bick and provided the conversation as confidential. Bob is rather ironical, to say the least. According to his theory a giant with a but around his neck and a rattle boy in his hand, would look out of place.

the esteem of two people you have gone. Don't permit any man to be familiar with you to the extent of calling you "Old Girl," or citing you as "One of the boys." You don't belong among the boys, and you should not be counted there. Don't let any man, unless you are betrothed to him, kiss you. Lips are of little worth to John which have been pressed by Tom, Dick and Harry. — Ladies' Home Journal.

Dusting Will Disappear. AN INVENTION WHICH ABSORBS VERMIN

We have a friend in the trade whose mind is continually running to labor-saving inventions, says the Upholster er. He has now arranged a series o fans so as to produce a suction that will draw up dust from the floors or furnishings of a house. Hear him:

"The motor is simple, and one has only to put the machine in the center of the room, wind her up, then get out of the way. When in motion the dust comes from all parts of the room and is immediately sanked and he then and is immediately sucked up by the fans into a box. In two minutes it will sweep a room of ordinary size. After sweeping your floors you retion come from the top instead of the bottom. Place a funnel over the ma then you go around your furniture. Wherever you hold the hose the dust is immediately sucked through into the box. In five minutes there is not a particle of dust to be seen around the room. Besides collecting the dust, this machine will collect all the insects of a house. Imagine for a moment plied, "I have some money of my own, the ceiling of your room filled with I have a parrot that can swear, and a mosquitoes. Bring in your lightning monkey that can chew tobacco, so I cleaner, set the hose and draw it across the ceiling, and the mosquitoes disap-
