The republicans now control both branches of Congress. They profess to know all about the tariff, and yet they have done nothing with it, not because of democratic opposition, but because they are hopelessly split among them-selves on that subject. And not on that alone, for it is quite sure now that the force bill cannot pass at this session. This is owing to republican opposition and the leader of the opposition is none other than Senator Quay, the Boss of the whole republican party. The Force bill is purely a republican measure.
