Special Washington Correspondence-

Washington, D. C., October 6th, 1890. It appears that Quay has reached the limits of his resources in the direction of evolving campaign expedients. His last effort is one that is far more likely to recoil upon him and his candidate Delamater than anything he has yet attempted during the present canvass. It will be recalled that not long since, on a day set apart in the Senate for eulogies to the memory of the late Samuel J. Randall, Mr. Quay made his first public address since he has been a member of that body. It had been carefully prepared, and in substance, was fitting for the occasion. Had this been the end of the matter it would have stood as a creditable act in would have stood as a creditable act in the otherwise unsavory career of the junior Senator from Pennsylvania.

It now transpires that the address in question was delivered from an altogether different purpose than that of doing honor to the memory of Mr. Randall. In short, it was part of a scheme to aid the election of Delamater. The speech of Senator Quay on the occassion mentioned has been printed in pamphlet form by the thousands, and it is to be distributed among all the Randall Democrats in Pennsylall the Randall Democrats in Pennsyl all the Kandall Democrats in Pennsylvania. The speech will go out with campaign documents, favoring Delamater's, election accompanying them. In that way Quay hopes to attract the attention of Democrats by dragging from the grave their loved leader who only so recently was taken from public life. Disaffection being rife in the Republican ranks, Quay and Delamater can only hope to win by dividthe Republican ranks, Quay and Delamater can only hope to win by dividing the sentiment of the Democrats in the State. That this knave (Quay) should use the memory of one honored, loved and respected by the democratic party, is as gross an insult to dead and to living that he could devise.

Randall's record was that of honesty and canacity in the highest decree.

Randall's record was that of honesty and capacity in the highest degree. Quay's career, from start to finish, has been that of a rascal, who makes but few pretenses of statesmanship, and whose sole success has been as a dishonest political manipulator. To couple Delamater's campaign documents with an eulogy on Samuel J. Randall, is a piece of impudence such as Quay alone would attempt. Every Democrat should rise up in arms against such sacrilege. Every decent republican should do the same.

Quay's descent as a political figure

Quay's descent as a political figure at the National Capital continues to be marked. While the President was at Cresson, Senator Quay sent a telegram to Private Secretary Halford announceto Private Secretary Halford announcing that he (Quay) would pass through Cresson on his way to Beaver, and would be glad to time his trip so as to have an interview with the President while en route. There was no occasion in the world for such an interview, except to afford Quay an opportunity to show that he was still received by the President. The scheme did not work. Private Secretary Halford replied that the President hau arranged so many excursions into the surrounding country excursions into the surrounding country that he could make no arrangements in advance. This is but another evidence that the Penhsylvania Boss is no longer within touch of the Administration. His pull at the public test is ended, and the sconer the Republicans of the Keystone State out local from of the Keystone State cut loose from him the better they will fare. R. R. W.

honor of Cæsar Rodney, one of Dela-ware's representatives in the Continen-tal Congress. The oration on that occasion was delivered by Mr. Bayard, retary of State in President Cleveland's Cabinet. In the course of his speech Mr. Bayard read a letter written by Thomas McKean to Casar Agustus Rodney, dated August 22, 1813, which contained the following paragraph about Independence Day:
"Now that I am on this subject will tell you some truths not generally known. In the printed public journals of Congress for 1776, volume 2, it would appear that the Declaration of Independence was signed on the 4th of July by the members whose names are there inserted; but the fact is not so. For no persons signed it on that day nor for many days after, and among the names subscribed one was against it-Mr. Read-and seven were not in Congress on that day, namely: Messra. Morris, Rush, Clymer, Smith, Taylor and Ross, of Pennsyl vania, and Mr. Thornton, of New Hampshire; nor were the six gentle-men last named at that time members. The five for Pennsylvania were ap-pointed delegates by the convention of that State on the 20th of July, and Mr. Thornton entered Congress for the first time on the 4th of November fol-

Secretary Bayard was not the first man to tell the country that the Fourth of July had been burning powder and shooting cannons under false pretenses, for Judge Chamberlain, of Boston, ex-posed the Fourth's false charms sev-eral years before. The Judge's investigations lead us to re-write the hisvestigations lead us to re-write the history of those eventful days as follows:

On the 2d day of July, 1776, the Continental Congress at Philadelphia decided that the Colonies were big boys now, and entitled to set up in business for themselves. So a committee was appointed to write this announcement on coffee-colored paper, in dim ink, and to add thereto a few reremarks about the King of England calculated to put him in a cheerful

This declaration was read two days later, on the 4th, and the members liked it very well, but did not sign it, and it is this ommission which makes the day a pretender as a national anniyersary. On the 19th of July Congress decided to have the document written a little more distinctly, and on parchment, and to have it signed by every member, but it was not until August 2 that the most of the delegates were ready to attach their sig-natures, and thereby resolve to hang together in order to avoid hanging separately in case King George should resent their writing in such a familiar way. - Santa Claus.

BURNING SULPHUR IS DANGEROUS AND SHOULD NOT BE DONE.

The practice often prevalent, of the practice often prevalent, of burning sulphur in the sick room or in the habitable rooms of the house dur-ing the continuance of a case of diphtheria or other contagions disease is productive of evil and should never be allowed. We have often found the air almost irrespirable from this cause, practiced under the belief that the conpracticed under the belief that the con-tinual burning of a little sulphur would destroy the germs or poisoning of the disease and thereby protect those of the house hold not already in-fected. This theory is wholly an erroneous one. Many experiments have been made which show that the dens-ity of sulphur fames (sulphurous acid) must be greater than can be tolerated by a human being in order to destroy the germs of disease.

The air of the sick room, bad enough at the best, should be kept as pure as possible, it should not be vitiated by the fumes of burning sulphur. The latter acts as an irritant to the air pas-sages against which the lungs protest, besides consuming some of the oxygen of the air which is so necessary to the support of life, thus doing positive harm to the patient. Still more, it impairs the natural powers of resistance to disease, and thereby indirectly becomes an agent to bring about a condition it is popularly supposed to retard.—From the Trained Nurse.
