foxhunters in the United States has tlers' doors. just occurred in the purchase by the Radnor Hunt, of Bryn Mawr, of Rutat Belvoir, near Grantham, Lincolnshire, England.

The Duke of Beaufort, the sporting authority in England, says that "there are no such hounds to be found and thei long pedigree and royal style justifies their holding the first rank." The Marduis of Worchester, son of the agency price of 50 guineas per couple or about $262. The second whipperin of the Belvoir, son of the chier huntsman, Mr. Frank Gillard, Jim, will accompany the hounds to this country, and will inaugurate the careful maintenance and training of the hounds for the Radnor on the elabor- St. Paul Railway. ate plan pursued at the Rutland Hunt

Several American hunts have been on the qui vive to get a draft from the Belvoir kennels, but the prize has been at last obtained by the Radnor, who have thus secured for Philadelphia the credit of securing the first importation of these splendid animals. They also hold the refusal of next year's draft. The Radnor hunts through Montgomery, Chester and Delaware counties and only the wild fox. Their meets occur twice a week through the season.

Miss. Lillie Doak has moved her er's building on Main street to the H. C. Hartman residence on Market street. She is now in Philadelphia getting the latest Spring styles. 2 t.

water from dirty vessels are as liable to disease, as people are and as an unhealthy chick can not thrive, it is very necessary to exercise care in that direction.

The pots or vessels for water should be cleaned very often.

It is now considered unhealthy to feed corn meal to chicks, especially in its raw state.

If fed at all it should be thoroughly cooked, and fed as mush.

Stale bread soaked in milk is the best food for the first week or two. Give screening or cracked wheat as soon as the chick will eat it, once or twice a week.

The Way to Boom a Town.

The Philadelphia Inquirer refeering editorially to the recent fever epi-demic at Bethlehem, says: "One of the greatest difficulties in making the suburban and inland towns healthy is the over-caution of some well-meaning people, who fear that to call attention to any serious local danger to health is to hurt the town. Instead of this being so the exact contrary is true. That suburban town would have a boom where the local authorities looked after every case of scarlet fever, diphthera and other contageous dis-eases and prevented other children in the same house from attending the schools, where the authorities were alert to spy out danger to the public health and prompt to enforce as rigid remedies as might be necessary. Some abolished."
