BRIAROREEK.

Mr. Samuel Slicker lost a very valuable horse on last Sunday.

Snow on the 6th of May, put a great many farmers out of the notion to plant corn yet.

Mr. Clemuel Woodin, of Berwick in fast building his summer residence in Briarcreek, which is about one mile north of Berwick. This will be one of the grandest sites in the community.

Mr. Samuel Knorr has under his management a very large registered Clydesdale stallion. The stallion weighs fourteen hundred pounds, and is only three years old. We under-sland a stock company of twenty four farmers of Mifflinville and Briarcreek township have an interest in the horse.

Ash & Bro. resumed operations at their distillery on the first of May. We see Mt. L. D. Kase making his daily visits to their place again. 'That's right, Mr. Kase keep them straight.

We hear the cry from most every ones lips, that the cold weather I am afraid has killed all the fruit.

A surprise party was given for Mrs. S. Barton on last Saturday afternoon being her birthday. She received some very valuable presents. A dozen cane-bottom chairs, stands, and many other smaller things, which were very much appreciated.

POULTRY NOTES.

No. 16.

Filth, lice, disease, death.

Did you notice that smell when you passed the hen house?

It will pay in the health of the family and poultry, to clean cups, and disinfect with carbolic acid diluted in water.

There are poultry houses that are not safe to enter, unless you wish to be attacked by millions of lice. How is vours?

Now is the time to white wash and clean up, and make things smell clean and sweet.

It pays to make pets of your stock of any kind as you will thereby get the best results. Red Caps, says the Fancier's Review, derive their name from the bright red caps shaped comb by the Convention, conducted by Rev. which adorns their heads which in cocks grows to a large size. The Red

In coal mines there is liability of violent and destructive explosions from accumulations of gas, and this trouble is peculiarly liable in anthracite mining. To obviate this danger it is necessary to have an air current constantly-maintained, the circulation being by airways. Upon the strength and vigor of the air current depends the safety of the mine, and a cessation of the circulation would allow a dangerous accumulation of gas which might explode. The purpose of this annunciator, a model of which was shown and its workings fully explained to the commission, is to furnish automatic and reliable indication of the air current, and to record the same on a dial, also to transmit the signal sounds through the medium of a telephone or electric bell to the office of general management in the mining district.

Caps have never undergone any of the process of breeding strictly for fancy points alone, utility being placed first, fancy coming in as an after consideration, it is hard to find a handsomer fowl than the Red Caps. The male is a bird of handsome appearance, broad in breast, wide across the shoulders, and good length of limb. Comb should be large, erect, nicely shaped, and full of points with straight spike behind. It should also be perfectly firm on the the head. In color, the cock is rich dark red with black breast and tail. The comb of the hen is similar only smaller, the feathers on breast, back, saddle, shoulders, and underparts are rich neat brown, each feather tipped with a bluish black spangle; they are nonsellers, and extraordinary good layers, wherever kept they make themselves favorites. With regard to utility, very few breeds will p. m. turn out as many eggs in the course of a year.
