Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."

Dr. G. C. Osgood, Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."

Dr. J. F. Kincheloe, Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."

H. A. Archer, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

Collegiate Education.

JAY GOULD BELIEVES IN PRACTICAL EDUCATION FIRST OF ALL.

Some of the over-zealous friends of the present standard of collegiate education are poking fun at Jay Gould because he not long ago said: "It seems to me that our colleges ought to adopt a new course. The time, I think, has come for them to pay less attention to the Greeks, Romans and Hebrews and the dead languages, and understand that this is a progressive country." But these gentlemen do not do Mr. Gould justice by giving all he said, for he added this: "A person is very much misplaced here who does not know how to help himself with his own hands. I think well of education and have always been partial to it, but it would be the easiest thing for our colleges to have mechanical and manual departments incorporated in their system of tuition. The sons of wealthy men would feel all the more secure if they had learned some trade while at college." That Mr. Gould was not talking without purpose is shown by what followed. He said: "I have seen that in the case of my own family. My son George is an expert telegrapher, and when he has traveled with me to the West we generally live in our car and switch it off at a siding. My son will then put on his boots, his steel clamps or prongs, and go up the telegraph pole, attach the wire to his instrument in the car, and then he sends for me all my telegraph messages. It causes him no disparagement, and makes him feel that he could get his living at all times." But we may take only the sentences first quoted from Mr. Gould about college professors, and we find nothing so amazing in them as these gentlemen pretend to have discovered. Indeed his remarks were brought out by a late declaration of the Emperor of Germany that he regarded the large and inactive educated class as something of a menace to modern times. Indeed what Mr. Gould said was only repeating what Richard Cobden (the Cobden spoken of by Disraeli as an honor to England, and by John Bright as "the manliest and gentlest spirit that ever quitted or tenanted a human form") gave utterance to in an address at the opening of the Manchester Athenaeum many years ago. He was anxious, he said, during a tour of Greece to see the celebrated river Ilyssus, and when at last he reached it he found that elusive stream narrow and shallow, a party of Greek washerwomen making the only practical use of it possible. "And yet," said he "the students of Oxford and Cambridge will spend much time in enthusiastic inquiries concerning the source and course of the Ilyssus, and will be content to be almost entirely ignorant of the Mississippi that rolls through two thousand miles of country and bears on its breast the commerce of a mighty continent."

What girls can do.

There are three bright, active young ladies employed in the Record's composing rooms who excel many so-called "journs" for rapid work and clean proofs. They are the Misses Charity Hine, Sallie Kent and Louisa Tilden, and compose a trio of which any printing office could well afford to feel proud of. All three learned their trade in this office, and can beat the boys all hollow setting type.—Milton Record.
