A Young Girl's Room.

A Young girl's room may be as full of costly articles as wealth can make it, or it may be the result of taste and ingenuity with but trifling expense, but the one who looks in upon it can, if choosing to take the pains to do so, tell at once the character of the occu pant by the mere arrangement or disarrangement of the place. There is, of course, the pretty artistic ensemble that at first glance seems to be only confusion, but which presently resolves itself into a harmony of form and tint. any change in which would be discord, which tells something interesting concerning the artist in the arranger. Then there is the precise and prim manner, in which everything is at right angles : every book is exactly in position on every other book; no folderols are allowed; nothing that indicates a waste of time or a love of pleasure ; and everything that indicates methodical, utilitarian, and exacting traits, with little love of beauty, indicates a character that will by-and by possibly make life a burden to every one in the house. There is the confusion, again, which is disorder, where everything has been tossed at random; there is no place for anything, and nothing is in its place, thus telling a lamentable tale of its first cause. And then there is the abode of neatness without fanatical and pragmatical effort for it, of order without primness, of grace and spotlessness combined ; a room where a little of the artist is to be seen, a little of the precision and something of the perfect love of order without its caricature.- Harper's Bazar.

How nicely Hood's Sarsaparilla hits the needs of people who feel "all tired" or "run down," from any cause. It seems to oil up the whole mechanicism of the body so that all moves smoothly and work becomes a positive delight. Be sure to get Hood's.

A TRIEUTE TO THE SHEAVES.

All day the reavers on the hill Eave plied their task with sturdy will, But now the field is void and still. And, wandering thither, I have found The bearded spears in sheaves well bound, And stacked in many a golden mound.

And while cool evening suavely grows, And o'er the sunset's dying rose The first great white star throbs and glows,

And from the clear east, red of glare,

The ascendant harve t moon floats fair Through dreamy de ps and purple air, And in among the slanted sheaves

A tender light its glamour weaves A lovely light that Lires, deceives-

Then swayed by Fancy's dear command, Amid the past I seem to stand. In hallowed Bethlehem's barvest land!

And through the dim field vague described, A homeward host of shadows glide, And sickles gleam on every side.

Shadows of man and maid I trace, With shapes of strength and shapes of grace, Yet gaze but on a single face-

A candid brow still smooth with youth; A tranquil smile; a micu of truth-The patient, star-eyed gleaner, Ruth! --Edgar Fawcett,

RATHER ONE SIDED.

Her Aggravating Coolness Broke Ilis Heart.

She (cheerfully). "My dear, I should imagine by this time you had discovered how unprofitable it is to quarrel with me.

He (fuming). "I don't care a-She. "Careful, dear, careful." He (with rising voice). "I don't want to be careful. I want you to understand I won't have these goings on any longer." She (meditatively). "Goings on? What remarkable English! I think I have heard something like that in the kitchen ; but never mind, dear; come sit beside me on the divan, and tell me what a 'going on' is and who did it; is it something awfully jolly that you men do at the club?"

He. "Now, look here, Amelia, I won't stand this any longer, I-She, "Well, dear, I just asked you to sit down. He. "Don't exasperate me. You may be sorry. I'm dangerous when I lose my temper.

She (laughing). "Coo-chee-coo! B'esa um heart, Neddie dangerous! Oh, de-lightful! You wicked, wicked Bluebeard. Now, I ask you again, come sit down beside me and tell me what a 'going on' is, so I can get one.

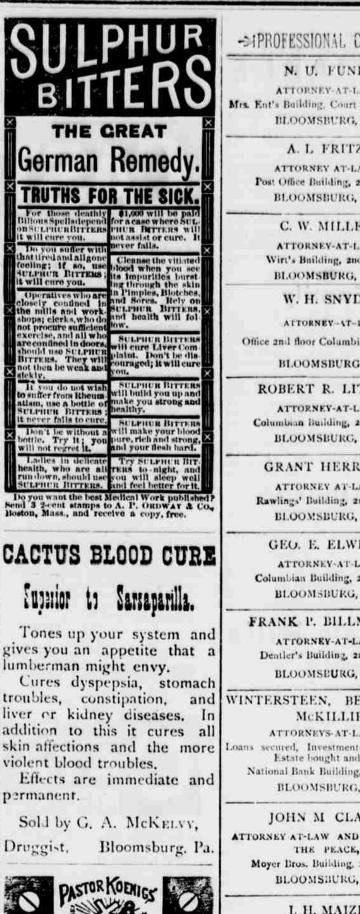

He (fairly bursting with rage). "I will not, I-She (rising), "Oh, very well, dear. I must go out now. If I meet Jack Rivers

I shall ask him to tell me what it is 'you won't have any more.' I'll see you at dinner, dearest." He (soliloquizing). "Ugh! I don't understand it; wnenever I try to be serious with that woman she makes a perfect ass of me. Yet when I fly into a rage at the office everybody is frightened to death. I won't stand it, that's all. And then to say she'd ask Jack Rivers what I meant-t'e very man I was going to speak to her about! I'll put a stop to it! Yes, I will, by-

Children's Boo's in Alfred's Time. As might be supposed, the earliest book that is assigned to the child is the Latin grammar. Boys' Latin grammars for several centuries were mere text books compiled from the larger works of Donatus and Priscian, a d they were commonly known by the name of "Donates" or "Donete," a term which occurs in "Piers Flowman." The word grammar, on the contrary, was used more in connection with Latin studies generally, and science, as well as even magical power, w..s sometimes spoken of as grammarye. A very commonly used school book in monasteries seems to have been the "Consolations of Philosophy" (in the original, of course), by Boethius, of which at least a fragment "would most probably be found even in the most meager convent library. The earliest book in existence written expressly for boys is here stated to be Aldhelm's "De Septenario, de Metris, Ænigmatibus, ac Pedum Regulis, " which probably appeared about the end of the 7th century. A great part of it consists of dialogues between teacher and pupil, in the style which was still popular in the first half of the present century, and may be found in such works as Mrs. Markham's History. The Venerable Bede is also claimed as a writer for the young. A lesson book for children is attributed to Alcuin, and it contains questions on arithmetic which are said to be found even in some current schoolbooks. Here is a specimen of them: "An old man met a child. 'Good day, my son.' says he; may you live as long as you have lived, and as much more, and thrice as much as all this, and if God give you one year in addition to the others you will be just a century old.' What was the lad's age?" The first book given to his people in English by Alfred the Great was the already mentioned "Consolations of Philosophy," to which he added "The Universal History of Orosius," a very favorite book in monastery schools. In the 10th century, Ælfric, "the grammarian," wrote a "Colloquy," intended as a reading book to help boys to speak Latin. It consists of conversations about every day life. In one place a boy is made to say that he is too young to eat meat; but he was not too young to drink beer, as he says that he drinks ale, "if he can get it." In the same century appeared a book on astronomy for children, as well as a map, now preserved in the British Museum, "less incorrect and having fewer fabulous countries than some made later.
