

A STIRRING BUSINESS.

Yes, a regular revolution business in which one sale helps to make another The people make us stir around to fill orders, and evidently believe we do a fair square business. Seeing we have the test the officer stamps it with his own such a large patronage too, convinces others they better try us, and so the trade increases. We're happy over it, and so are all our customers. The de-mand for our bread, cakes and candies (our own manufacture), is greater than ever, but we are ready to supply the demand. As the holidays are now coming on you will be thinking of Clear Toys. Give us a trial on these goods.

UNILE SAM'S GREAT GUNS.

An Englishman's Tribute to the Excellence of American Methods.

Lieutenant Colonel Hope, who was for some time an attache of the British legation at Washington, has written a very complimentary report on the manufacture of great guns at the gun foundry in the Washington navy yard. He says that not only was he flattered with a kind invitation to inspect the method of manufacture, but he was asked to criticise freely. Having seen so much of the troubles of the French and of the English gun factories, he had expected to condemn everything. He could do noth-ing but praise. He found the tools and the guns perfect of their kind. The faulty proportion and abominable workmanship" of the English guns are most carefully avoided, and "the Washington guns can be thoroughly relied upon to do what they profess to do, and they profess to do just a little more than English guns profess to do." This, he says, is a very arge statement, but the Elswick and the Woolwich guns can not be relied upon to do more than 50 or 75 per cent of what they profess to do.

He thinks that the secret of this superiority in the Washington guns workmanship is due to the fastening of the re-sponsibility for everything upon some one official by name. In England the system, or lack of system, is that no one man shall ever, under any circumstances, be responsible for any one thing. But wise old Uncle Sam insists upon some one man being responsible by name for each individual thing. Officers of the United States navy are appointed to test the steel at the works, and if it passes name. The manufacture of the forging into a gun, as well as all of its parts, has to be done under the supervision of designated officers, each of whom finally decides whether it meets all of the requirements, and stamps each with his name and date of test.

Call a girl a spring chicken and she will laugh; call a woman a ben and she gets mad. Call a young lady a witch and she will enjoy it; call an old woman a witch and your life is in danger. Call a girl a kitten and she won't take it unkindly; call a woman a cat and she will hate you. -St. Louis Republic.
