GRIEF PROVE HER CRAZY

THE SAD CIRCUMSTANCES CONNECTED WITH A MINER'S DEATH.

A WEIRD SCENE UNDERGROUND.

WILKESBARRE, March 6. The story of the tragic death of John Traynor, of Coal Run, this county contains elements of weirdness scarcely ever found outside the realms of fiction. Traynor was a fire boss in one of the largest collieries in that part of the coal regions. Yesterday morning about 3 o'clock he entered the mine, as was his custom, to examine chambers and test the gas. He never returned alive. His young wife became alarmed at his strange absence, trial for the spy. and besought her neighbors to search

A party was organized and twelve miners made a thorough search of the works, but without avail. When the news was broken to the wife she became distracted, and it was feared for a time that she would go mad. She

WENT TO HUNT HER HUSBHND.

Diligent search throughout the village failed to discover any trace of her whereabouts, and it was generally supposed that the loss of her husband had unbalanced her mind and she had wandered off to the mountains. A party of nine surveyors who were examining some old workings this afternoon stumbled on a sudden and startling solution of the mystery. Entering an old breast close to the manway, which forms the second opening of the mine, they heard the sound of a human voice in the darkness some distance beyond. They listened intently and were startled to recognize the voice as that of a female crooning softly the words of a love song. Summoning all their courage they crawled over the loose coal to the place from where the voice preceded, flashing their lamps around.

The light soon fell upon the face of a wild-eyed woman, holding in her lap the head of a man apparently dead. his eyes!" She swayed gently from side to side while she sung. It was a sight to chill the stoutest heart with terror, and the last time as they looked around in a country. It was entitled the Illuminmen were about to beat a hasty retreat | dazed way. I wanted to shout to the when one of them exclaimed: "My boy and warn him that it was not even God! it's Mrs. Traynor."

men lifted up the poor woman, who raised a cry of despair and fainted as soon as she felt the friendly touch of their hands. She was taken to the surface at once and borne to her desolate home, followed by the dead body of her young husband. The wife is now a raving maniac.

It is supposed that when she disappeared she made directly for the man way and stumbled across the body of her husband, who had been caught by a fall of top coal on his way out, and the discovery turned her brain. The neighbors of the little mining town are doing what they can for the afflicted woman, but it is feared that her terrible experience in the mine has dethroned her reason forever.

The surprise of Rip Van Winkle when awaking from his long slumber could not have been greater than the consumptive's, upon finding himself entirely relieved by Dr. Bull's, Cough Syrup. 25 cts.

Another ingenious mechanism has been added to the vast number evolved in railroad economies-in the present instance a new kind of clock, the peculiar capabilities of which it is thought present special advantages to locomotive engineers. The dial plate and figures are of large size, as are also both the hour and minute hands, and the operation of these latter constitutes the novel feature in the invention. As a train whirls past a station the hour and minute hands whirl around like a flash to mark the correct time, and a red bullseye flashes into the dial; five minutes later the red light turns green, and in five minutes more the green light disappears. The engineer on the next train following can thus tell exactly how many minutes ahead is the train that precedes him. The clock is Feb. 25,1892, Leonard Ray infant a perfect timekeeper, and when the son of Geo. and Verna Smith of Jack train passes drops the signal light.

On The Drum Head-

THE CURLY-HEADED SPY WAS SHOT TO DEATH BY SOLDIERS.

We had crossed the river to hunt for Lee and give him battle in the wilderness. Darkness was just settling down and the advance had halted for the night when a squad of cavalry brought in a young man from our front. He wore a mixed uniform, as did most of the Confederates at that day, or as did most of those belonging to the par-tisan commands. He had on blue trousers, a butternut jacket and his hat belonged to neither side. They said he was a spy. They said it care-lessly enough, but there was an awful significance in the term, at that hour. In camp he would have been searched, interrogated and imprisoned. It might have been weeks before his trial and he would have been allowed every chance for his life.

We were on the march. There had been fighting. There would be more to-morrow. That meant a drum head

How speedily everything was arranged! I was at headquarters and saw and heard it all. Within half an hour a court-martial was convened grave-faced officers who looked into the face of the young man at first with interest -then with something like admiration. I sa'd a young man, I was short time, saying she was certain her husband would be found.

I sa'd a young man, I was wrong. He was a boy of 17 or 18. He had big blue eye', chestnut curls and his chestnut curls girl's. He was a handsome lad, and I believe that every man in the tent felt to pity him.

*What's your name?" "James Blank." "What regiment?" No reply.

"Are you a citizen or soldier?" No reply.

"Can you make any defense to the charge of being a spy?"

No reply. The officers looked at each other and nodded, and the president waved his hand. It didn't seem a minute before a file of soldiers came. The face of the boy grew white, but he moved like one in a dream. His big blue eyes looked upon one after another, as if yearned to cry out that he was only a boy and ought to be given more time.

Tramp! Tramp! Tramp! It was the detail marching him off into the darkness. 'Halt! Tie this handkerchief over yet too late to prove that he was not He was right. Gently the strong what they believed him to I e, but the grimness of the scene parched my > tongue. Place him there! Fall back! At tention! Ready-aim-fire!"

Ten minutes later the officer in charge of the firing party touched his cap and reported:

"Orders have been executed, sir?" "Any further evidence?"

"No, sir, except that she was a young woman!"-New York World

THE VENOMOUS TARANTULA.

In an Encounter He Kills a Rattlesunke in Ten Minutes.

It is quite a common thing among the soldiers of Arizona to pit tarantulas against each other and bet on the fight-ing powers of their favorites. This fact undoubtedly suggested to the clerks in H. H. Tammen's curiosity store in Denver the idea of getting up a fight berattlesnake.

Before the fight began the odds were ten to one in favor of the snake, and there were few takers. The proprietor was not in at the time and the clerks had closed the store for the night, so there was not much probability of an interruption. The big snake was driven into one end of his cage and a partition let down to keep him safe, so the tarautula could be introduced.

The little sliding door at the other end, carefully protected by a closely-woven wire screen, was raised and the tarantula slipped into the compartment. Then the partition was pulled up and eager eyes peered through the glass sides of the cage to witness the result. The tarantula arose and bristled all over like a chestnut burr, the rattlesuake reared its head and thrust forth its forked tongue with the rapidity of lightning. Thus the two strange and deadly creatures remained for a moment gazing at each other. Sud-denly there was heard the thrilling whirr of the sunke's rattles and with the pliancy of a steel spring the snake threw himself into a coil with his head raised in the center and vibrating rapidly from side to side. The tarantula was as immovable as if carved in stone.

Suddenly, with a motion almost too swift for the eye to follow, the rattler struck, but he missed his mark, for the tarantula, with the speed of lightning, bounded into the air, and, descending on one of the serpent's coils, sunk his fangs into the flesh. The snake instantly began thrashing around the cage and dislodged

Again the tarantula became immovable, and again the serpent coiled and struck, only to be foiled. Fire seemed to flash from the eyes of both the contestants, and both appeared to know that it was a fight to the death.

There was now a tremulous motion vis ible in every limb of the tarantula, and it was evident that he was contemplating offensive measures. With the leap of a tiger he bounded upon his foe and once more sank his fangs into the body of the snake. This time it was in vain for the serpent to writhe and flounder, for the tarantula clung to his enemy with the tenacity of a bulldog. The spider was bruised and beaten, some of his legs were broken, but he held on with desperate courage, and gradually the efforts of the rattler grew weaker, until at last his coils relaxed, and with only a faint vibration of his tail he lay stretched out upon the bottom of his cage dead. The deadly venom of the tarantula had done its work.

The fight lasted only ten minutes, and was a most thrilling exhibition of ferocity and courage. The quickness of motion exhibited by the tarantula was marvelous, and through it he avoided being struck by the serpent. The dead serpent was evidence against the clerks, and they searching for a friend, and my heart had to confess to the proprietor that they had introduced the tarautula to the serpent with a result none of them had ap ticipated. - Arizona Great Divide.

The Paper World has among its odds and ends a copy of what is supposed to ated Quadruple Constellation, and was issued at New York, July 4, 1859, by one George Roberts. The edition was to have been 28,000, but it is reported that the press broke down before the full number was run. It was sold at 50 cents a copy. The size of this mastodon sheet was 70 by 100 inches, or almost 49 square feet, eight pages, 18 columns to the page, or a total of 104 columns each 48 inches in length.

It was illustrated with good portraits of President James Buchanan, Edward Everett, Henry Ward Beecher, N. P. Banks, Edwin H. Chapin, Horace Greeley, Elizabeth Barrett Browning, Alex-ander von Humboldt, James Gordon Bennett, and several others. The paper contained 36 different e ems entire, among them "Braddock's Defeat, or the Battle of Monongahela," a poem of 64 eight-line verses, occupying one column and a fourth, or exactly five feet of

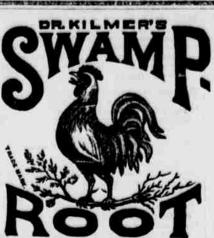

Among other articles of especial note published in that leviathan sheet was the celebrated "Moon Hoax," taken from a copy of the New York Sun, published in 1835. The weight of the paper required for the edition of 23,000 was equal to that required for printing 2,000,000 copies of either the New York Times or Her-ald. The paper cost the published a ream and each ream weighed 360 pounds. It required the work of 40 persons 10 hours per day for eight weeks to set up and publish this gigantic edition.
