Lifting an Elephant

London has been entertained lately by feats of strength that are certainly remarkable and probably unsurpassed in modern times. First there was a man named Sandow, who was an enormously powerful man; he was succeed ed by Sampson, and he in turn by an Irish-American named Sullivan. Curiously, the three names begin with the letter S, which is also the initial ot "strength," and of the Greek word for strength (sthenos). Sullivan, the latest comer, is thirty years of age, stands 5 feet 8¹/₄ inches in height, and weighs 168 pounds. His appearance presents little that is unusual in the way of muscular development, and his biceps are neither very large or wonderfully rigid, It is in his neck and jaw that his strength chieffy lies, and the majority of his feats are such as bring this peculiarity into special prominence. At an exhibition given in London, he fastened a chain to a 56-pound weight, tion the president, directors, managers, and the other end being gripped be-tween his teeth, swung himself round and round until the twirling chain assumed a nearly horizontal line. The feat was repeated with the weight doubled, and as the performer, with both hands to his hips, and using every sinew in his frame, swirled round and round, the audience wondered with anxiety what would happen if one of the links should fly asunder. The most remarkable feat, however, that Sullivan performed was the lifting of an elephant by his teeth. It was a "baby," tis true, but it weighed about 1800 pounds, and was lifted a clear three inches from the ground, its whole weight pendent from the jaw of the man above. Sullivan was not success ful in an attempt to break a chain with his arm, having injured this limb on the previous night. He succeeded, however, in proving that his provess was not entirely confined to feats with his teeth, by lifting a barrel of water, weighing 560 pounds, with the middle finger of his right hand.-Harper's Young People.

The following is going the rounds of the press in regard to the change of management in the Lehigh Valley WOMAN IS RULED AGAINST EVEN WHEN Railroad :

"When Asa Packer died he left $15 000,000 invested in the Lehigh Valley Railroad with the recommendation that it be allowed to remain there for an indefinite period. As is known, Mr. Packer left but one child, a daughter. Some years ago she married Charley Cummings, a popular Lehigh Val-ley conductor, but who was poor and was not favorably received by some of the relatives. Cummings, believing himself the representative of the Packer estate, sought favor with the active management and attempted to advance himself to the presidency of the road. Wilbur. Not Playing Fair-

SHE IS BADLY HURT.

Let a woman be killed in a railroad accident, and if she has a policy in a travelers' insurance company her heirs may get the same sum that a man's heirs may; but let the poor woman be boaten and broken and the breath of life almost knocked out of her, as long as there is a bit of breath left in her body, so long she may not receive a bit of accident insurance money, even though her policy is against accident She will read it only to find this clause: "Except that this ticket insures Fe males against death only." For women to be called females with a capital letter is sufficiently old-fashioned and barbarous, but for the travelers insurance not to insure them, too, against accident is not playing fair.

The theory probably is that women are not wage earning creatures. Yet way to buy spring bonnets, or to the feminine head of a household whom a like injury forces to hire nurses and clause far behind the times, and, be of women travel in these travelsome

THE INVISIBLE ARMY Of microbes (micro-organisms) is a mighty host, which indeed no man can number. Invisible to the naked eye, the poisonous part of this army is the cause of four fifths of all the diseases of the human family-they destroy more lives than war, famine, fire, murder and shipwreck combined, and they actually abbreviate the aver-age term of human life by three-fourths. The way to relieve the human body of these microbes is to take Swift's Specific. When this inedicine gets well into the system the poisonous germ must leave-he cannot exist through the pores of the skin. After he departs, a continued use of the Specific will force out the poison, and the patient is well. Treatise on Blood and Skin Diseases mailed free.
