TO BEAUTIFY CHEAPLY. HOW TO GIVE PLEASANT TONE TO A ROOM AT SLIGHT COST.

Secret of Decorative Success. — Good Judgment and a Willing Hand May Work Wonders, Even Though the Materials Used be Simple and Inexpensive. Young housekeepers, and old ones, too, for that matter, often find the decoration of walls and ceilings a hard nut to crack, even when the house is their own, and a moderate expenditure of money for the purpose quite within their reach.

Where economy is the prime object, distemper may be resorted to, although it is doubtful if anything so perishable as distemper is really economical. Flatted oil paint is far better on account of the readiness with which it lends itself to thorough cleansing with soap and water. Having settled upon either one or the other the question of tint suggests itself.

It is safe in our climate to decide upon a warm rather than a cold tint of a medium depth of tone, and a broken rather than a positive color. Another safeguard is to make the walls lighter than the wood work, and the golden rule to have the coloring always become brighter as it ascends must not be lost sight of.

After the wall is tinted a simple stencil pattern may be applied all over, or merely as a frieze. If the latter is used it must be purely conventional, picked out with gold or some of the colored bronzes. Here another point should be observed. To many persons gold is gold, and they have a vague idea that it is yellow. Yellow gold answers admirably in many cases, but with olive, or gray, or bluish greens the effect will be decidedly better if the gold inclines strongly to red.

It is better, too, to confine the gold to delicate lines or touches than to splash it all over the walls, which causes them to appear to be closing in. The stenciled frieze is more troublesome than to apply a frieze of paper. These are, even the cheapest of them, good in color and design. Another advantage in using the paper frieze is that a length of it may be planed or tacked to the wall and the effect studied before it is permanently applied.

The ceiling, must, of course, be lighter than the side walls, and, unless the room be very small, a border of the same or a similar border to the frieze, but of a lighter tint and less decided pattern, is desirable. In this matter the individual taste of the decorator will assert itself and one will with these simple and inexpensive means bring harmony where another would only succeed in working discord.

The foregoing outlines a cheap method of dealing with walls and ceilings, but the cost of even this method is a serious matter in some cases. The white walls are grievous. The prettiest of furnishings appear at their worst against such a background. Where the coarse gray mortar is left without a "finishing" coat of "hard finish" it is somewhat better, but even then it is bad enough. Something must be done. If one is blessed with the coarse gray plaster, a fringe of paper or stencil extending to the picture rail will do much to mitigate the bareness of the walls.

A similar decoration on the ceiling will help matters. If the walls are "hard finished" the whiteness must be gotten rid of. Perhaps the simplest and cheapest way to do this is to cover them with common brown packing paper. This, with a cheap paper frieze, or with a simple conventional stenciled frieze, may be made to work wonders. Because a thing is cheap it need not be inert, and a harmony in color may be worked out in the most inexpensive materials.

To still lessen the expense one may select some of the pretty papers offered by dealers in paper hangings, that if well chosen are very effective. The best, which may also be the cheapest, are those in which all the colors of the rainbow are mingled in such a manner as to produce an effect of gray, or brown, or terracotta, or olive, or any tint that is required. Two of these may be combined with good effect. Cheaper still, and by no means ineffective, is tinting the "whitewash" the desired shade. This makeshift, however, can not be recommended except for rooms that are very little used. The white, or whatever color wash, will rub off with the slightest provocation, will spot with water, even the slightest dampness will discolor it, and vexation of spirit will be the result.

Still, it may be made to serve as a dernier resort, and is better than bare, white walls, which are sepulchral in the extreme. Schemes of color will suggest themselves to the artistic eye, and the economical mind will find ways and means to carry them out in one way or another, even where the means are most limited.

A Problem.

The other day a journal, hitherto without a spot on its character, inquired with well-feigned innocence: "How can five persons divide five eggs so that each man will receive one, and still one remain in the dish?" After several hundred people went two-thirds distracted in the mazes of this proposition, the journal manfully says: "One takes the dish with the egg."

THE BEST APERIENT

In modern pharmacy is, undoubtedly, Ayer's Cathartic Pills. Except in extreme cases, physicians have abandoned the use of drastic purgatives, and recommend a milder, but no less effective medicine. The favorite is Ayer's Pills, the superior medicinal virtues of which have been certified to under the official seals of state chemists, as well as by hosts of eminent doctors and pharmacists. No other pill so well supplies the demand of the general public for a safe, certain, and agreeable family medicine.

I have used them in my family and caused them to be used among my friends and employees for more than twenty years. To my certain knowledge many cases of the following complaints have been completely and permanently cured by the use of Ayer's Pills alone: Third day chills, dumb ague, bilious fever, sick headache, rheumatism, flux, dyspepsia, constipation, and hard colic. I know that a moderate use of Ayer's Pills, continued for a few days or weeks, as the nature of the complaint required, would be found an absolute cure for the disorders I have named above.—J. O. Wilson, Contractor and Builder, Sulphur Springs, Texas.

The Right Words. Closely connected with the subject of the power of plain speech is that of the use of the right words in the right place. When cumbrous or extravagant forms of speech have been abandoned in favor of simple and straightforward language, it is still necessary for the speaker to consider carefully whether he is expressing what he means. The lack of a nice discrimination in the choice of words frequently makes ridiculous or ineffective what otherwise might have been a telling piece of English. It is better to know the meaning of a few words than to guess at the meaning of many. No word is so common that some new force may not be found for it by a consultation of the dictionary—an exercise which often proves to intelligent persons that they do not know its proper definition at all. It is surprising to see how persistently some early misapprehension, or some erroneous definition given by parent or teacher, will cling to the memory. Again, even when the rough meaning of a word has been ascertained, there still remains something to be done in searching for the finer distinctions between it and kindred words. Something more than mere strength is needed; there must also be skill and discretion in the use of language. A great writer is almost always an apt writer.

Stutterers in the Fourth Century. Divers, we see doo Stut. The Cause may bee (in most) the Refrigeration of the Tongue; Whereby it is less apt to move. And therefore we see that Naturalls doe generally Stut: And we see in those that Stut, if they drinke Wine moderately, they Stut lesse, because it heateth: And so we see, that they Stut, doe Stut more in the first offer to speake, than in Continuance; Because the Tongue is, by Motion, somewhat heated. In some also, it may be (though rarely) the Driness of the Tongue; which likewise maketh it lesse apt to move, as well as Cold; for it is an Affect that it cometh to some Wise and Great Men. As it did unto Moses, who was Linguae Præputatus; and many Stutterers (wee finde) are very Cholericke Men; Choler Enducing a Driness in the Tongue.—From Sylva Sylvarum, Century IV.

The great thing is the sense of having done the best—the sense which is the real life of the artist and the absence of which is his death, of having drawn from his intellectual instrument the finest music that nature had hidden in it, of having played it as it should be played.

Merit Wins. We desire to say to our citizens, that for years we have been selling Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Dr. King's New Life Pills, Bucklen's Arnica Salve and Electric Bitters, and have never handled remedies that sell as well, or that have given such universal satisfaction. We do not hesitate to guarantee them every time, and we stand ready to refund the purchase price, if satisfactory results do not follow their use. These remedies have won their great popularity purely on their merits. C. A. Klein, druggist.
