WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, June 6, 1892. Mr. Blaine is nothing if not dramatic and that his resignation was the carefully worked up climax of the professional dramatist is not for a moment to be doubted. He has recently con cluded that he wanted the nomination. and all his actions since he reached that conclusion have been carefully planned with that end in view, and his resignation, which speaks as plain as if he said I am again in the field", was announced just at the time when it would do the most effective work with wavering delegates arriving at Minneapolis.

The Washington idea is that the resignation of Mr. Blaine knocks the last leg from under Harrison's chance. although there are some who believe that Blaine may still be beaten in the convention, but it does not look that way to your correspondent. Democrats are well pleased over the situation. Mr. Harrison will aid Mr. Blane, if he is the nominee, to just about the extent that President Arthur did in 1884. Mr. Harrison would probably have lost his own state if he had been nominated, and his defeat by Mr. Blaine's peculiar methods will place that state in the democratic column, and he has power enough to see that the man who snatched from him at the last minute that which he had been foolish enough to think solely his personal property, is hurt in other States. In other words, Blaine secretly opposed by Harrison will be a much easier man to beat than Harrison supported by Blaine would be. The two men whom Mr. Harrison ought to blame the most are Secretary Fost-er and Attorney General Miller. They, by their ill-advised talk against Blaine, furnished the excuse for him to resign which he was looking for; but he would of course have found some other excuse if they had guarded their tongue better. Saintly Mr Wanamaker has been explaining again ; his public life has been very unfortunate in this repect. This time he rises to say to the committee on Postoffices of the house that the statement made under oath by Mr. Samuel G. Leake, of Philadelphia, to the effect that Mr. Wanamaker had, after making certain promise to him concerning the erection of an experimental pneumatic tube to he used by the Philadelphia City postoffice, become interested, he believed, in 7.500 shares of stock which another pneumatic company had set aside for postoffice officials, and declined to fulfill his promise, was untrue. He also informs the committee that "I shall be pleased to answer any call that the comwhich meets Thursday evenings at 7 o'clock at the Parish house. " Evil disposed persons might place a bad construction upon the wording of the sentence quoted, but such is not my purpose. I deal with facts; others may put their own construction upon those facts. Straws show which way the wind blows. U. S. Treasurer Nebeker is certain that he will have no use for a residence in Washington after the 4th of next March, that he has given up the lease upon the house his family has occupied since he entered office. When asked why he did not renew his lease, Mr. Nebeker laughingly re-

Lynching Negroes in the South.

The frequent instances of the lynching of negroes in the South has lately attracted the attention of prominent religious bodies, such as the recent Presbyterian General Assembly, and has called out earnest protests from whites and blacks in the North. It is an appalling problem, but how is it to be met and solved?

Just when the churches, the public journals and philanthropic citizens of both races in the North were calling upon the South to halt this summary punishment of negroes, a horrible re-port comes of the swift lynching ot a negro at Port Jervis in New York State. This lawless execution occured within twenty paces of one of the leading churches in the village.

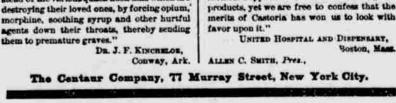

This object lesson of Northern ideas of justice when a brute assaults a helpless woman on the highway proves that under like provocation, Northern and Southern people are alike human and likely to employ the same methods to protect the women of the land.

Let us look the sober facts in the face. Assaults upon women by brutal negroes have been multiplying each year in the South since the colored race has been given the rights of citizenship to protect and elevate its people This is not an argument against the freedom and citizenship accorded to the slaves ; but it presents a condition that calls for heroic remedial measures.

The chief feature of injustice exhibited in the summary lynching of negroes for criminal assaults upon women, is in the fact that, as a rule, the white brute who commits the same crime, escapes the summary exccution usually inflicted upon negroes. In point of fact, any crime committed by a negro that furnishes some measure of excuse for lynching him, should be regarded as meriting precisely the same punishment when committed by the white man.

But what is the remedy for both North and South to assure protection to the honor and persons of women? All public journals; all religious as semblies; all representative bodies of good citizens will unite in denouncing the lynching of negroes for the gravest offense against social order, but each individual of all these aggregations will, as a rule, confess that the rope or the revolver of the lyncher is the only remedy for the increasing assaults upor, women. While these assaults continue lynching will continue; and there's the end on't.

The theory of the majes'y of the law is undisputed; but the peculiar condition sets it aside and lynching is excused even when none can justify it. It has been so for years past, it will be so for years to come ; and until some system of government shall be devised to restrain the brutes who assault women, there will be little practical resistance to the enforcement of lynch law where a helpless woman's dishonor is to be avenged. This is not the common view of the question that is presented in the regulation deliverances on the subject, but it is the they are as we represent them, truth, and it is a truth that all should full length, full weight, bona- look manfully in the face .- Times.
