We are, at present, enjoying our-self in the wood-lands of Orangeville and Forks, and indulge in catching has and trout. We have met with good success fishing and propose to remain till we get thoroughly cooled from the rays of the sun we left on the other side of the mountain. This is a beautiful fertile country, and fine promises of a good harvest. We found Commissioner B. F. Edgar at home, the pleasant entertaining gentleman of his domicile, and surrounded with a fine landed property. He is enlarging his distillery to at least twice the capacity of its former self. Every where we go we find he has hosts of friends and hence it is no wonder that he was easily elected as one of the Commissioners of Columbia Co. and the impression is he is giving excellent satisfaction. We are not to forget that ex-Sheriff Sam'l Smith is a partner of Mr. Edgar and has been for the the last 3 years. Glad to meet the ex-Sheriff when visiting at Mr. Edgars.

North of Orangeville 3 miles, J. P. Creasy is having a new frame house erected on his farm by A. P. Kitchen. formerly of Orangeville but now of Berwick. Cyrus Eveland of Peeler town asst. The house is of modern improvements and when finished will be a very comfortable home. Mr. Kitchen is well known in Berwick as and excellent carpenter and house

O. A. Peeler of Peelertown owns the celebrated stallion formerly owned by Sam'i Heller of Berwick, and is using him with great success. This horse comes from the best of Kentucky stock; a beautiful horse.

A M. Smith and J. W. Geisinger travel below "Forks" frequently; a first class girl is inside of it. J. W. drives a new buggy. They are both first class young men.

At Asbury Children's meeting was held on last Sabbath with fine success. Wm. Unangst is running a fine farm near the Forks, and is doing well, except his own hea'th-afflicted with rheumatism. His home is a pleasant resort for sojourners fishing along the streams. It has been 10 yrs. since Mr. Unangst has applied for a pension-broken in health-is as near to it as he was then, while others get theirs inside of a few months. He was a faithful soldier and rendered long service.

J. M. Ammerman is doing good business in the mercantile line about 4 miles north of Orangeville; has a fine line of goods, the best the market affords.

White & Conner are doing good business in the manufacture of threshing machines, plows, harrows, cultivators and other farming implements. The shoe manufactory firm are progressing finely. G. N. Smith is running a large stove and tinware establishment on Main J. B. DeLong also has a fine large doing well selling goods. C. M. Cook is the tonsorial artist.

J. L. Conner is the flourishing baker and confectioner.

Landlord Turner has a splendid specimen colt from "Frank M." It is one of the finest we have ever seen.

Woodin Hanly, Robt, S. Swazy, Robt, G. Welsh, Fred R. Seesholtz and Wm. Clemens have just returned from trout fishing near Baumtown. They en camped on Painter run. They had a grand time; caught over a thousand trout; had fireworks on Monday night and lumbermen and citizens turned out enmasse.

Impertinence deserves rebuke, and one man got it handsomely. Revamping an old saying, he remarked that if he were so unlucky as to have a stupid son he should certainly make him a parson. A clergyman who head him replied: "You think differently from your father then."

FUNNY DECOYS.

Pup Scale and Other Counterfetts Made

Out of Wood In Alaska. Shut up in a drawer at the National Museum, where nobody has the privilege of seeing them, is a curious collection of decoys. Perhaps the funniest among them is a pup seal about a foot and a half long, quite artistically carved out of wood. Its little paws are folded across its chest, and it is intended to float on its back upon the water, just as the animal it represents does in real life. However, it is not intended as a decoy for mother seals, as may be imagined, but as a float for tying a fishing line to. Fishes, recognizing the innocence of pup seals in general, are not likely to suspect that one would dangle a hook and line to catch them. This is an Alaskan decoy, of course. The natives of that region employ decoy ducks made of wood in a similar fashion-not to attract real ducks within reach of arrows or bullets, but as floats merely. To the floats, set a-swim-ming in the rivers, lines are attached, with hooks and bait for salmon. No ordinarily wise salmon would be afraid of a duck. So these fishes bite eagerly at the lures suspended from the counterfeit birds in the water and are caught. Another very queer decoy in the drawer is a fish, cut out of wood and painted white. No label states, unfortunately, precisely how it is employed, although it is certain that it is a counterfeit intended to attract some big fishes. Big salmon could swallow prey of such a size, and it may be designed as bait for them. Think, however, of the disgust which would be felt by any scally ogre at finding that he had taken in a wooden fish one foot long! -Washington Star.

City Government in Germany. " With us municipal offices are the spoils of successful politicians; in Germany they are the prizes of successful experts. It seems to a German as incredible to hear of a city governed by men who are just pausing on their way to some higher place as it would be to hear of a railroad or cotton mill thus superintended. Good city administration with us is an accident. It occurs because the man with the appointing power happens to appoint a good agent. In Germany, city work is a science as far from politics as is the science of engineering or architecture. Each salaried alderman is responsible for a single department, or for several closely allied parts of the public business. He does not serve, as do our aldermen, on three or four scattered committeesschools, licenses and sewers-about none of which he has any scientific knowledge. He is elected to his office because of his knowledge and skill in a special field of municipal work, and takes charge of that department. Thus, city work offers to a young German a life career, just as railroading or manufac-turing does in America. An educated man makes a special study of water works or building laws or poor relief. He learns the methods of the best European cities. He serves his time in the administration of some small town, and perhaps gets a place at the head of his chosen department in some small city, and tries to make that department a model of efficiency and economy; finally, he finds the end of his professional ambition in being promoted to the same work in one of the great cities of the kingdom. Here he has a place of dignity in the social world and, if successful, holds a life office with the assurance of a pension for himself and his family.-Forum.

A kindly feeling can not fail to touch

The Rock of Gibraltar. at Gibraltar. It is impossible to describe the effect produced on the mind by the sight of those immense tunnels, crossing each other in all directions, bifurcating again and again, sometimes lit up, sometimes wrapped in the deepest darkness, forming an inextricable network of galleries and passages, a most confused labyrinth, the way out of which could be found by no one who did not possess the cue of Ariadne.

The slopes by which we ascended were smooth and wide, better than some high-roads traversed all day long by passengers. Frequently we came upon enormous heaps of cannon balls stored in case of need, or we found an embrasure in the living rock through which a gun was pointed as though ready to begin work on the spot, surrounded by all the necessary ammunition. Sometimes the darkness was so dense that I scarcely dared move my feet for fear of falling over one or other of those iron monsters, and on more than one occasion I was forced to strike a match to find my way through those gloomy caverns, while I found myself nearly always lagging behind my guide, who, knowing the way and being more active on his legs, kept ahead until he reached the next loophole, when he waited for me.

At last we reached a spot where the passage was barred by thick timbers, and where my guide told me we could go no farther, as this was the reserve part of the fortress where excavations are still being made to continue the enormous

This place, he said, was closed to all outsiders; and even the officers of the English army not on duty at the works are scarcely allowed to see it. I had, therefore, to resign myself to forego the sight of the greatest part of that mysterious cavern, and approached the nearest loophole-the highest we had yet passed -to admire the delicious view and breathe the fresh air to which it gave ac-

From the cursory examination which, considering the precautions necessary there, was all I was able to make of the immense fortrees. I gathered that it was an impregnable position, which, bristling with cannon and pierced with loopholes looking toward every direction from which an enemy could conceivably come, makes it simply impossible for an army to take it by force. To get possession of Gibraltar, I have not the slightest doubt that it would first be necessary to appihilate it.

STRATEGIES OF STATESMEN.

Utsmark and the Pretty French Woman-Grevy's Ruse.

The late Baron de Loe, the diplomat, was renowned as much for the beauty of his wife as for anything else. The baroness was a French woman of surpassing good looks. When a young girl she made a conquest of Bismarck at the casino of Biarritz. Bismarck to have an excuse for getting into conversation with her aunt, who accompanied her, stumbled against that lady, and then, after the proper apologies and a brief chat with the aunt, asked the beautiful niece to waltz, and devoted himself to her all the time he was in France. The attentions were entirely platonic and were supposed to be a feather in the young lady's cap.

Little stratagems of this sort, though seemingly rude, appear to be in vogue on the continent to bring about acquaintanceship. The late President Grevy, so the story went, once purposely tore Queen Isabella's dress at an Elysee ball so that a young newspaper writer in whom he was interested might step up with a package of pins, as had previously been arranged, and secure an interview while repairing the rent. The little device worked in this case like a charm, and Grevy afterward parrated the incident with great humor .- New York World.

Cattle and Muste.

A writer on the effects of musical sounds on animals has published some curious observations on this subject. A few of these relating to oxen and cows will be of interest. "Opposite to our house was a large field, in which some twelve or thirteen cows were put during the summer months. One day a German band began to play on the road which divided the house from the field. The cows were quietly grazing at the other end of the field, but no sooner did they hear the music than they at once advanced toward it, and stood with their heads over the wall, attentively listening. This might have passed unnoticed, but, upon the musicians going away, the animals followed them as well as they could on the other side of the wall, and when they could get no further stood lowing piteously. So excited did the cows become that some of them ran round and round the field to try to get out, but, finding no outlet, returned to the same corner where they had lost sight of the band; and it was some time before they seemed satisfied that the sweet sounds were really gone.

"I have often noticed the power music has over oxen. The other day we had a brass band playing in our garden. In a field adjoining there were four Scotch oxen. When the band struck up they were at the far end of the nine-acre field. quite out of sight, the field being very uneven. They set off full trot to the garden wall, put their necks over, and remained so till the tune was finished, when they went back to graze; but, as soon as the music struck up again, they came and put their heads once more over the wall. This went on till the band left, after which they ate very little all day, and were continually lowing."

Author's Stories.

At the Author's Club it was storytellers' night. President Frank Stockton presided, and introduced the story-tellers. W. Hamilton Gibson said that he was sketching for Harper's in the White Mountains, and put up at a house, where at breakfast the next morning the woman put before him a plate of cakes moist and pale. One of the guests said they were more thoroughly brown. A moment later the same cakes were returned with the words, "Them's the dondest they be." Mr. Gibson challenged the company to produce a rarer specimen of Anglo-Saxon as she is massacred.

He told another story; that he put up at the house of a man in New England, who said that he did not think there would be any agricultural fair that year because there had been no crop, and the times were too hard to yield a successful fair. Mr. Gibson then turned to the old gentleman's grandson, a huge, strapping boy, and said, "There is Chauncey; he would make a good exhibit at any fair." "No, I would not," replied Chauncey, "cause I ain't got no pedigree!"

Durability of Wood.

The problem has puzzled many why two pieces of wood, sawed from the same section of a tree, should possess very varied characteristics when used in different positions. For example, a gate post will be found to decay much faster if the butt end of the tree is uppermost that would be the case if the top was placed in this position. The reason is that the moisture of the atmosphere will permeate the pores of the wood much more rapidly the way the tree grew than it would in the opposite direction. Microscopical examination proves that the pores invite the ascent of moisture, while they repel its descent. Take the familiar case of a wooden bucket. Many may have noticed that some of the staves appear to be entirely saturated, while others are apparently quite dry. This arises from the same cause; the dry staves are in the position in which the tree grew, while the saturated ones are reversed.

Old Times at the Capital.

In recalling the lively and picturesque incidents which the old-timers enjoyed in Washington, one is moved almost to tears over the commonplace nature of his own times. John Adams used to bathe in the Potomac every morning at daythe White House and no one ever pulled a kodak on him. President Tay-lor used to walk about town and stop and chat with every one he met, like a polloeman. A reception in the White House in these days is relieved of monotony only by the great crush of guests, who trample the clothes of each other's backs. Another President sat up in the East Room a 600-pound choose and invited the multitude to come in and belp itself, which the multitude proceeded to do.-Augusta Chronicle.

CALLED IN A BURGLAR.

HE OPENED A SUBTREASURY VAULT THAT BAFFLED LOCKSMITH EXPERTS.

About six months ago an order ar rived at the subtreasury directing the treasurer to have all the time locks on the vaults cleaned, says the Sin Francisco Chronicle. Among those that were taken out was one on a reserve vault containing $12,000,000 in silver. From the lock on the door to this vault the locksmith took only such parts as needed to be cleaned, leaving the rest in the door. When the vault was closed the tumblers fell into their places, the "catch" of the time lock, or hat part that was left, caught all ight, and the door was securely locked so securely locked, in fact, that it was found impossible to open it again, for the part of the time lock that should release the catch on the nside was outside in the hands of the locksmith The combination knob was turned this way and that, and everything that would in any way tend o loosen the bolt was done, but to no effect. The locksmith even went so far as to put a plank against the door and pound away with a sledge in the hope that something would give way, but still the door remained securely closed, and as there was really no necessity to open the vault the treasury seal was placed on the door and things remained as they were.

It became apparent that something had to be done, however, and it having been learned that "Billy" Ensign was in town, he was hunted up. Ensign is the well-known cracksman whose ability to pick locks has more than once landed him in prison, and the propriety of calling him in was considered at some length before it was decided to resort to his skill. "Billy" went into the subtreasury and at once set to work. He tinkered with the combinanot done, and sent hers back to get some tion knob for a while, and then getting down to business, put his ear against the door and began slowly to turn the knob back and forth, listening intently to the click of the tumblers as they fell into their places. How he did it no one of the bystanders could determine, but it is certain that his manipulation of the knob affected the time lock in some way, for he suddenly straightened up, grabbed the lever that moves the steel boits, and giving it a quick, sharp jerk, the door swung open before the astonished clerks. Ensign knew nothing about the lock when he started in to open the door, and all Treasurer Jackson could say was; "He's a wizard."
