Precautions against Cholera Morbus, Sum mer Diarrhea and Dysentery.

All of these well known diseases occur principally during the summer and autumn.

Cholera Morbus is caused by im-proper food and sudden chilling of the thrown against it, they will stick fast body after exposure to great heat. to it. Certain substances will produce it in certain persons, such for instance as veal, raw milk taken with fish, or shell head is bad, and you are bad clean through, what is needed?" asked a such as rice pudding, cream puffs and even ice cream, when kept too long. Unripe and over-ripe fruit, especially if taken with large draughts of ice water, will also cause it. But sound, ripe fruit is a natural food in hot weather, and wholesome. Avoid becoming chilled during sleep. In a climate as changeable as ours, a light blanket should always be at hand, to be drawn up in case it suddenly becomes cold during the night. Persistent SUMMER DIARRHOEA is usually caused by malaria, sewer air or impure water. The conditions liable to contaminate air and water should be carefully sought out and remedied as indicated in speaking of Asiatic cholera. The water can be rendered safe by boiling. As DYSENTERY is often epidemic, it is wise to consider every case as a possible source of danger to others, and to disinfect the discharges with the same care and in the same manner as already directed for those of Asiatic

ABSURD FIGURES. With their usual appreciation of the The Fitness of Things Too Seldom Considered.

Seldom have men or women the facown appearance; were the ability to do this less rare, we should not be amused or pained, as the case may be, by absurd vagaries in the way of dress. A small, thin man will put on a high hat under the impression that it makes him look taller, while in reality it only makes him present the appearance of a pair of scissors under a thimble. A tall, thin woman will wear a hat, in itself becoming, but which, taking her height and slenderness into the question, gives her all the appearance of a church spire. Her stout sister, who has a round, broad face, affects headgear resembling a turban as closely as the fashion will permit, and in consequence seems to lose several inches of her height. This principal runs through the question of manner quite as much as that of dress. The elephantine woman adopts the kittenish ways which are laughable in one of her appearance. The diminutive man drops his voice with great exertion into a heavy base, and as-sumes a majestic carriage that is suitable for nothing short of six feet. But in nothing is this lack of taste—to call it by no harsher name-more noticeable, than in the selection of sengs made by the average amateur singer. Imagine a young woman whose general appearance indicates the most robust health, beseeching her hearers to lay her "among the daisies!" or a fragile youth announcirg in a weak, piping tenor, "Thy senti-nel am I!" Such things are never forgotten, and at the end of a decade, every one of that audience, should they meet these performers, will remember the unfortunate evening when they sang these incongruous songs, and the absurd figure they cut in doing it.

In countries where military conscription exists, men pretend to be afflicted in divers ways in order to escape service. Pretended inability to see is exposed by the surgeons without difficulty, but pre-tended deafness sometimes baffles the examiners. A counter trick on the part of the officers was for some time effective against this fraud. The recruiting officer, after a conscript had pretended to be deaf, remarked, in an ordinary tone of voice, "You are unfit for the service; you are free." In many cases the recruit showed by evident signs of satisfaction that he had heard the remark. He was then recalled, told that he had been detected in his fraud, and sent to the barracks. After a time, however, the conscripts became too wary to be caught in the trap. They had heard of the trick, and were on the lookout for this remark, and when it was uttered they made no sign of intelligence. A new trap has therefore been invented by French officers, the success of which is a curious illustration of the ingrained courtesy, on the part of Frenchmen of all classes. After the "You are free" has failed to excite any sign of understanding in the recruit's face, the command to go is shouted at him. He starts out of the room, the door of which is held open by mechanical means. As he passes through it, the officer says: "You might at least shut the door!" This little unjust impeachment of the man's politeness is said in nine cases out of ten of pretended deafness to result in a quick turning of the man's head. He is then called back, and told that he has been found fit for the ser-

"What is the price of that?" "Half a crown."

"Could you get me some more of them?" "Certainly."

"Well, let me have twenty to-morrow

The retail dealer, whose stock consisted of a few linnets, a chaffinch or two and four or five staggering larks, looked aghast. Said his friend on the way home: "What on earth did you want with all those hedge-hogs?"

"I'll put them in my garden," said Rossetti, "and when fellows come to see my pictures they'll pass through the gar-den. 'Look at this little round ball,' one of them will say: 'why, it's alive. And here's another! and here's a third! Why, the garden is full of them.' And then they'll be in such good spirits at the dis-covery that they'll buy my pictures!"

How Garfield Was Scared.

Secretary Foster has been telling some queer secrets about President Garfield, with whom he was on terms of the closest intimacy. As illustrating his fear of the newspapers a summer night incident at Willard's Hotel in Washington is recalled, when a party of Mr. Garfield's intimate friends got together in one of the upper rooms facing Newspaper row and began playing a game of cards with a 10-cent ante. It was hot, and the whole party had their coats and vests off and their sleeves rolled up to the elbows. The windows were wide open, and by the gaslight anybody could look in on the game from across the street. Suddenly a messenger boy came to the door with a message, which read thus: "Immense excitement on Newspaper row. A big crowd is watching your little game. Pools are being sold on the result, and the boys are sending despatches out over the country concerning it." The mes-sage was read aloud, and it scared Mr. Garfield half out of his boots. Of course it was a bogus message, but it was hard to make Mr. Garfield believe it was not genuine, and it spoiled all his fun that summer night.

The little husband and wife not only build a house for themselves, but they also make a garden around it.

make a garden around it.

After having made up their minds to build, the first thing they do is to find a nice spot of ground, with some kind of shrub growing near the center of it. Then they pile green moss on the ground all around the shrub. Next the birds bring long green twigs, which they have broken from off the branches of trees, and stick them into the ground so that they will them into the ground so that they will lean against the top of the shrub like the framework of a small tent. One side is left open for a door.

When the little house is built the bird at once set to work to make their garde The husband bird does the heavier wor, and all around the house he clears of space for a lawn, carrying away every ston-and stick and every bit of straw that is in the way. He then covers the space with the finest green moss that he can find, and upon the velvety lawn he lays many prett berries and pink flowers, and as often a the flowers fade he takes them away and brings fresh ones.

This house, which is three feet long and more than a foot high, is very large for two little birds. Indeed the house is ample enough to accommodate a family of twen-ty. The garden, too, is large in propor-tion and is sometimes six feet long and even longer. It is said that the people in that far off country think so much of these birds that they never harm them. And now you may wish to know how this little warbler is dressed. The top of his head, his back, his wings and his tall are brown and his breast a greenish red. In size he is about the size of a robin.—Edith Jackson in New York Mail and Express.
