I have been a great sufferer from catarrh for over ten years; had it very bad, could hardly breath. Some nights I could not sleep and had to walk the floor. I purchased Ely's Cream Balm and am using it freely, it is working a cure surely. I have advised several friends to use it, and with happy result in every case. It is the medicine above all other for catarrh, and it is worth its weight in gold. I thank God I have found a remedy I can use with safety and that does all that is claimed for it. ## CLEVELAND WILL WIN

AN EX-REPUBLICAN GIVES REASONS FOR THAT OPINION.

General J. S. Catlin Writes Interestingly of the Situation-Hill Men Are Loyal and Will Work for the Ticket-Cleveland's Hemarkable Popularity.

I went over into the Democratic ranks mainly on account of my admiration for Sworn to before me and subscribed Mr. Cleveland and his methods of adin my presence, this 6th day of De- ministration, and as that admiration has continued and increased in strength up to the present time, I may not be looked upon as an impartial judge of the political situation in its relations to him.

A favorable word from a representative of that gallant body of men who adhered to the fortunes of Senator David B. Hill would carry with it more force, more satisfaction and more authority than a volume dictated by one of Mr. Cleveland's enthusiastic political

No man who has any knowledge of affairs in New York state will for a moment undervalue the influence of the men who opposed the nomination of Mr. Cleveland at Chicago. They are among the ablest, most popular and most influential men in the Democratic party. It is folly to say that they could not menace the success of the ticket in the state if they positively or negatively com-

But no man who has any knowledge of the reputation and character of these men will dare to charge them with proposed treachery to the action of the national convention or infidelity to the candidates it put in the field. The leaders of that grand column of New York delegates are not only gallant fighters, but they are true Democrats as well as absolutely honorable men. Their fight ended in the convention, and they so announced unreservedly and have since repeatedly reasserted it.

Mesars. Murphy and McLaughlin and Croker and Sheehan and the other leading spirits of the Hill movement have, by word and deed, given the most ample assurance of their determination to give the electoral ticket hearty, earnest and unremitting support. And I believe that long before the canvass shall be closed the country will hear from Senator Hill in such an unmistakable way that there will be no more question as to the action of his friends at the polls.

Assuming my position to be correct in reference to the action of these gentlemen, he must be a monument of incredulity or be completely blinded by partisanship who doubts the success of the Democratic ticket in this state in the coming election. Mr. Cleveland is stronger with the masses than in 1884 or 1888. His strength and popularity have increased amazingly among the people during the last three and a half years. The record of his growth in the confidence of the people has no parallel in American history. Chauncey Depew honored himself when he called him the "typical Amer-ican." And the truth of this was conspicuously demonstrated by the action of the national convention. The name of no other presidential candidate ever elicited such wild worship as the name of Cleveland at Chicago. Neither Lin-coln nor Grant nor Garfield evoked such tumultuous applause on the occasions of their respective nominations as Cleveland received in that great wigwam on the 26th of June last. And this, I say again, proves his unparalleled strength with the people. cago simply typifies the sentiment of the people throughout the entire Union. Wherever his name is mentioned it opens the valves and the surplus enthusiaem escapes in extraordinary demonstrations. I have attended six ratification meetings, three of them in the midst of the recent heated term, and I have never before seen such exhibitions in numbers and in unbounded enthusiasm. And the isene which Mr. Cleveland, more than all others, furnished the party has grown with the candidate. The campaign of education systematically begun in 1888 has been carried into every mill and mine and school district in the country, and it has grown in strength and popularity correspondingly with him who launched it upon the country from the presidential chair. While there are other vital matters, like the force bill, and the question of economy in administration, and the honest enforcement of the laws in reference to civil service reform, that will be the subject of political discussion, the question of tariff reform will be the main one.

Upon all the debatable ground the Democrats have the advantage of being right, and that will always prevail when the people understand it, as they will in the coming canvass. And hence I do not hesitate in declaring that the election of Cleveland and Stevenson is reasonably certain.—J. S. Catlin in New York Journal.

And but Little, Even Then.

The president and ex-Senator Platt, of New York, have not yet "made up." is understood that Platt has stated his terms of reconciliation, but that the president is loath to accept them. Yet he cannot have even the remotest hope of carrying New York without the co-operation of the "boss."-New Haven

The Force Bill Itinerary. Harrison advised the force bill, Reid's journal supported it, a Republican house passed it and a Republican national convention approved it. It is idle to say the force bill is not an issue and will not be a measure of Republican policy if that party is successful.-Elmira (N. Y.) Gazette.

SUBJECTS FOR THOUGHT.

What men want is not talent but purpose; not the power to achieve, but the will to labor.

He who gives advice to a self-conceited man stands himself in need of counsel from another. Silence holds the door against the strife of tongues and all the impertinences of idle conversation. Honors and public favors sometimes offer themselves the more readily to those who have no ambition for them. The fairest privilege of friendship lies in this—that the friend loves us with our faults, while others love us because they do not see them. Riches are not to be compared to con-tentment of heart. What does a fellow care if he does spend his pocket change here, if he knows he's got a bank account in heaven? Nature loves truth so well that it hardly ever admits of flourishing. Conceit is to nature what paint is to beauty; it is not only needless, but impairs what it would improve. When a man begins to do wrong, he can not answer for himself how far he may be carried on. He does not see beforehand, he can not know where he will find himself after the sin is committed. One false step leads to another; one evil concession requires another.

The poor, exiled shrub dreams of a splendid blossom which it has never seen, but is dimly conscious it ought somehow to produce. That is the way in which the ideal life, the life of full completion, haunts us all. We feel the thing we ought to be beating beneath the thing we are.

The most fascinating women are those that can most enrich the everyday moments of existence. In a particular and attaching sense, they are those who can partake our pleasures and our pains in the liveliest and most devoted manner. Beauty is little without this; with it she is triumphant.

The habit of dwelling on possible calamities, of elaborating possible dangers, of propheeying griefs that never come, and cherishing those that do assail us, leads to the manufacture of artificial trouble from which no good ever spring. In administration circles, the story coes, there is considerable uneasiness felt because of the growing apathy among the active Republican workers; because they declared before the Minneapolis convention, and have repeated it since, that "there are no inducements, from a federal patronage standpoint, for them to pull off their coats in behalf of Harrison.'

To counteract the widespread and steadily increasing feeling of discontent among the outs, it is said a member of the cabinet announces that in the event of the re-election of President Harrison "many important changes will be made in the personnel of the administration."-Charleston News and Courier.

Stultifying Themselves.

To a great extent the reciprocity project was a humbug. It was intended as a sugar coating for the bitter pill of the McKinley tariff. "What do we care for abroad?" said Major McKinley. "Let us cultivate and develop the home market and leave foreign trade to take care of itself," said other leading lights of Republicism. Yet in spite of these declarations of antagonism to foreign trade the Republicans tacked the reciprocity sections to the McKinley law with the pretended purpose of securing new foreign markets for our agriculturists and manufacturers.—Rochester (N.

Republicans of the wiser sort are making strenuous efforts to lift the force bill issue out of the campaign. Some of the organs insist that the issue is dead and that Harrison's letter of acceptance will give it burial. The at-tempt is vain. The issue is clearly made by the record and attitude of the party and its principal leaders. The force bill has been indorsed by Mr. Harrison and the controlling element in the party organization. Its principle is embodied and asserted in the platform of the
