We do not hesitate to guarantee them every time, and we stand ready to refund the purchase price, if satisfactory results do not follow their use. WHY WAGES GO UP.

An Important Question Answered by a Competent Authority.

The protectionist says that wages go up because of the taxes he loves on labor.

The truth is that wages go up because labor becomes more effective. If two men with improved machinery can produce what four men did before, the pay of each of the four being a dollar a day, the employer can afford to pay each of the two men $1.50. He will make a dollar a day by the operation, and the cost of labor in his product will be just that much less than it was.

In a late number of The American Wool and Cotton Reporter is a capital answer to the question we have asked. Today the help that ten years ago tended 120 spindles in worsted mills are tending 160 spindles, "making the increased production, it is declared, of at least equal quality."

The Noble comb has taken the place of the Lister comb, and it "gives double the quantity of top in the same time from the same stock."

The change from the fly to the ring frame gives 4,000 revolutions a minute instead of 2,600.

Machine dyeing has taken the place of hand methods, so that "in the use of acid dyestuffs feats are accomplished in less than two hours, and in the employment of sweet dyes in less than four hours, that by the uncertain hand processes would demand several days for their performance."

These are facts that have had a strong influence on wages in the worsted industry. Wages depend upon efficiency and product as well as upon the law of supply and demand. Invention has greatly multiplied man's power, and therefore the man receives more for his work than he did when his tools enabled him to produce less.

When a protectionist says that wages depend upon a statute that he has composed he is simply slandering human genius.—New York World.

Henry's Regrets.

Harrison's only reference to monopoly is indirect and mildly apologetic.—Chicago Herald.

In the Bondage of Trusts.

There is an interdependence between the McKinley Republican party and the trusts. The trusts supply the funds by which the Republican party is to be returned to power, and the party hopes to pass the force bill, surround the ballot boxes in the southern states with bayonets and maintain itself perpetually in power. In the language of the New York Tribune, there are 100 tariff measures in the force bill. No voter who objects to the domination of trusts and monopolies can vote to return the Republican party to power. The party is in the bondage of trusts and is willing to subvert the liberties of the people to permit their masters to amass wealth at the expense of the toiling millions.—Utica (N. Y.) Observer.

Cleveland Is No Straddler.

Cleveland wrote his famous tariff reform message as a sacrifice of policy to principle. He has time and again proven that he dared assert his views frankly, fully and plainly whenever occasion required, without regard to the consequences to himself. Cleveland certainly has earned immunity from the charge of being a straddler. He is exactly the opposite. No public man of the day is more positive and plain in the statement of his views. This fact has won the respect even of his political foes.—Omaha World-Herald.

Harrison Is a Vote Repeller.

In 1888 the Republican managers insisted that Harrison should spend the campaign at Indianapolis. He did not place his foot in New York state during the canvass. In the case of a man of Harrison's cold and somewhat repellent temperament this was good policy. If the Republican leaders reverse that policy now, their move will be regarded as a last desperate card in a losing game.—Rochester (N. Y.) Herald.

Raum Will Stick, if Possible.

Raum, one of the administration scandals, says that he has not resigned and that he has no intention to do so. Perhaps he has an understanding with the president that his resignation is not to be asked for. He may hold his job until next March, but he certainly will not hold it any longer than that.—Sioux City (Ia.) Tribune.

"Keep A-pushin and A-shovin."

Keep moving along, fellow Democrats. The fight for Cleveland will be a victorious one if persistently, vigorously made. But we must not stop for one day. Keep right along with discussions, arguments, practical work. What a great ticket we have to work for!—Harrisburg Patriot.

One Result of High Protection.

The people will understand that the additional burden placed upon their shoulders by the presence of the state troops at Homestead is the result of the policy of high protection as taught by the Republican party.—Williamsport (Pa.) Sun.
