BUSINESS COLLAPSE WITHOUT PRE- THE WOMAN OF FASHION. CEDENT.

IN COMMERCIAL DIASTERS THE YEAR 1893 HAS BEEN THE WORST IN FIFTY VEARS.

R. G. Dun & Co's, weekly review of trade last week says under the caption "The year 1893:"

Starting with the largest trade ever known, mills crowded with work and all business stimulated by high hopes, the year 1893 has proved, in sudden shrinkage of trade, in commercial disasters and depression of industries the worst for fifty years. Whether the final results of the panic of 1837 were relatively more severe the scanty records of that time do not clearly show. The year closes with prices of many products the lowest ever known, with millions of workers seeking in vain for work and charity laboring to keep back suffering and starvation all our cities.

The review of different departments of trade given to day exhibits a col-lapse of industry and business which is almost without precedent. The iron industry sustained a weekly production of 181,551 tons pig May 1, but by October 1 the output had fallen to 73,895 tons, and the recovery to about 100,000 December 1, still leaves forty per cent. of the force unemployed. Sales of cotton goods are fully a quarter below the usual quantity. The small advance attempted in boots and shoes a year ago was not sustained but with prices as low as ever, the shipments of boots and shoes from Boston are twenty-four per cent. less than last year in December, and though in November the decrease was but 10 8 per cent., it has been twentytwo per cent, for the last four months. GRAIN AND PROVISION MARKETS.

Not only manufactured goods as a whole, but the most important farm products are so low that producers find little comfort. Official and other reports deluded traders with the notion that crops of last year were so short that famine prices could be realized on purchases. Enormous stocks were bought and held with the aid of banks, until heavy receipts in the Spring caused a collapse of wheat, pork and cotton pools. Wheat was repeatedly sold here and at Chicago at the lowest price ever known, and is but a half cent above it now. Pork fell $7 in an hour when the speculation burst, but sells lower yet to-day. Cotton was lifted a cent with accounts of scarcity in September but has lost most of the gain and sells below eight

Monetary anxieties appeared to cause the panic, and became epidemic when doubts were raised in April about redemption of treasury notes in silver. Deposits in national banks alone decreased in five months nearly $300,000,000; purchases for consumption shrunk so much, so many hands were out of work, or earnings reduced wages and business of all kinds was so reduced that accumulation of idle money became the greatest ever known exceeding $200,000,000 in New York.

Clear evidence of the shrinkage in different branches of business is afforded by answers already received to several thousand circulars requesting figures of sales during the last half of 1893 and 1892. Returns of textile goods show sales amounting to $43,-893,875 this year against $70,347,882 last year, a decrease of sixty-seven per

THE DECREASE IN BUSINESS.

Iron returns aggregate $40,853.180 against $65,520,921 last year, a decrease of thirty-eight per cent; reports thus far of jewelry show a decrease of twenty-nine per cent; of furniture, twenty-six per cent.; of dry goods, twenty per cent.; of hats, nineteen onehalf per cent; of hardware, nineteen per cent.; of shoe manufacturers, eighteen per cent. and by dealers, eight per cent. It is curious that the only trade showing any increase as yet is in groceries, the aggregate sales being one per cent, larger than the last half of 1892.

In thirty-seven years, covered by the records of this agency, the number of failures has only once risen a little above 16,650 in a year. In 1893 the number reached has been 16,650. The aggregate of liabilities in all failures reported has in six years risen risen above $200,000,000. This year the strictly commercial liabilities alone have exceeded $631,422,939, the liabilities of banking and financial institutions have been $210,956,864 and the liabilities of railroads placed in the hands of receivers about $1,212,217,-033. As all reports hitherto have been to some extent erroneous, through inclusion of failures not strictly commercial, the classified returns show 3,266 manufacturing failures with liabilities of $164,707,449; 10,683 failures in legitimate trade with liabilities of $85,527,896 and 302 other failures, including brokers and speculators with liabilities of $36,662,735 The average of liabilities in manufacturing is $50,000; in legitimate trading $8,000, and in other failures $11,000.

A Bawildering Mage of Colors and Materiala

What Some of the Queer Names Mean -Effective Touches of Color on Black - The Overskirt's Steady Growth.

Joseph's coat of many colors was a dull, uninteresting garment next the fabrications of the 1893 modiste. Even the number of the materials which it presumably contained is fully equaled by many a street dress of to-day. This matter of materials and color has become to be a serious problem. In the beginning-not of the world but of the season-color held high carnival; all her fays were in the mad whirl. Scarlet, on a black steed, rode rampant through the center; azure perched daintily on a white mare with snowy trappings; flaming orange sat proudly on a beautiful chestnut; deep, royal purple looked regal on a glossy bay; while in the maze of brilliant dancers there were magneta and Russian green, and yellow, and a host of queer, unnamable shades. Society came and looked on for awhile, seemed interestested, and made as though it would put its stamp of approval thereon; when lol before one could realize it, society had itself turned its back upon them, showing its disap-proval additionally by the sober garb which it immediately proceeded to adopt. So that all the world was sobered for a time and went about in mourning robes. One saw black everywhere, from stately grandmother to frivolous granddaughter. That the fair dames hankered taken somewhat to ciel with our black and pale yellow is frequently employed soft effect. Particularly in the evening bonnet and dress is the yellow desirable. For it combines exquisitely with the tiny jet crowns, or the jet ornament or fillet that takes the place of toque. To be sure, it will be long be-fore magenta will be overwhelmed, for it has a glow and brightness about it that the quieter tints lack.

I saw yellow tastefully combined with black in a carriage cloak which I caught but a glimpse of as it passed. The black velvet turned back in big revers that were faced with creamy, rare old lace. At the edge was a tiny band of jet over pale yellow velvet. In the lap lay a bunch of yellow roses. Then a rich brown melted off into the creamy color. It was a plain skirt. with three rolls of velvet running around, several inches above the edge. A neat, close-fitting jacket, all of brown velvet, stopped just at the waist, turning away in front from the pale yellow silk that was gathered into long puffs from neck to waist. A very neat astrakhan hat, of low crown, topped the costume. It turned up in a quiet edge, which was cut away just in front, where wide satin ribbon, braided, was drawn over to meet the a grettes and black ornaments that rose up. Two single black satin choux finished the back. The overskirt idea is making rapid headway-not so much in street wear as in evening gown. Even in the former, however, it is noticeable—in the slight drape of the skirt that hangs over, almost to the length of the one beneath; in the fancy hip drapings; and in the prolongation of basques into pretty folds and falls. Two costumes are here reproduced that illustrate admirably some of the newest of the overskirt ventures. They after that gay maze of colors, how- have grace, a virtue which not all car ever, was evident; for one began to notice bits of color in among the dark folds. They were very taking, these harmless little things, that made such a wonderful change in the black effects; and so society was encouraged to go on in the work. Very stealthily, but very surely, the color crept in; and we now see the effects of it in the somewhat fantastic coloring that walks our streets. One readily distinguishes the woman of taste from the woman of color only. For a know or two will make the one and a perfect splurge of inharmonious shades will mar the other. That it is a season of color, one will grant when the long list of new tints is put before him. While black is still the ground-work, the sure foundation, it is so metamorphosed by brilliant additions that we view it in altogether different light than of yore. Here are the names of some of our fashionable shades.

Santal, a rich red brown; platine, a grayish white; cigale, true grasshopper tint; grenade, a plum red; matelot, deep sailor blue; vigne, a color that Solomon bids us beware of; chartreuse, a beautiful orange red; laurelle, a rich, deep pink; faison, a tender gray; many flower colors, as verveine, azalee, jacinthe and a host of other names, representing I know not what tirts. Colors and materials are mixed in this array of names. There is peau de suede, soft and thick mohair, with long hairs; the Montrose, a white vigogne of great richness; the Strand, a cheviot of black ground with a figure in colors, running over; the Flamande, a fine diagonal on satin ground; Middleton, a snowy sacking, with a rough and scraggly surface; Queenstown, an Irish poplin, and Eastbourne, a crinkled armure novelty. And so we struggle among fantasies and bewildering mazes of queer appellation.

In Paris the rather insipid rose color is combined with many shades of green, noticeably vert russe. Here we have lay claim to, and they are not to oradical for the average American.

One that I noticed is a black velours over a rich, dark red ground. The skirt is plain, with gathered back, simply edged with a band of brocade. Then over the plain bodice is fitted a second of the same dark brocade, cut round and low at the neck, and edged with black feather trimming. This bodice is slanted off entirely at the left side, and runs round to the back at the right. Beneath the belt, which is a slender band of feathers, falls the overskirt, a long, slightly gathered point of brocade, feather-edged. Short ruffles, in deep waves, fall over the sleeves. It is a dainty and very fetching costume.

Another is a black pointille, whose full skirt, edged with astrakhan, is very slightly draped in front. The waist fits without a wrinkle; over it falls a quaint bolero turned back in revers that hang in coquilles, fastened back with black buttons and faced with magenta satin. Over the hips a full basque falls, turning back in front after the manner of the bolero, and falling in similar coquilles, similarly All the edges have the narrow black astrakhan, even to the plain Henry H. cuffs that finish the big sleeves A mild overskirt is a cloth which falls within three inches of the feet, showing only a parrow brocaded edge on the skirt beneath. The upper skirt is cut in narrow widths, each joined to its neighbor by an astrakhan band. The bodice is a basque, whose cloth front has been cut entirely away to make room for the rich green satin that takes its place. From the waist line down the bodice is slit in the center and embroidered at the edge. A full cloth collet, of the green vigogue of the skirt, is pointed in front and meets over the bust. Two small intermediate puffs, on the sleeves, join the tight-fitting cuff and the immense EVA A. SCHUBERT. noper puit.
