

IN CONGRESS.

What Will the President Do With the Bland Bill for the Coinage of Seigniorage?

NEW YORK BANKERS OPPOSED TO IT.

Debate on the Tariff Bill to Begin April 2.

WASHINGTON, Mar. 19, 1894 (From our Regular Correspondent.)

What will President Cleveland do with the Bland bill for the coinage of the seigniorage, now in his hands? There is more anxiety among democrats to have this question answered than has been observable for a long time. It involves a great deal more than the mere coinage of 55,000,000 silver dollars, for which it provides. It will decide whether the attempt now being made to unite the democrats in Congress and the administration on a basis of let by gones be by gones shall be a failure, or a success that will enable the party to go into the Congressional campaign with a reasonable hope of retaining control of the House. It may also decide the fate of the tariff bill, as there are many democrats in both House and Senate whose constituents are more directly interested in silver than in the tariff. A number of eastern democrats who did everything in their power to prevent Congress passing the Bland bill are now advising the President to sign the bill, or at least to allow it to become a law without his signature if he feels that he cannot conscientiously sign it, and silver democrats who have not been to the White House since the big silver fight at the extra session, have gone to Mr. Cleveland and urged as a matter of party policy that the bill be allowed to become a law. The silver democrats of the west and south—how numerous they are in Congress may be seen by referring to the vote on this bill in both House and Senate—many of whom supported the administration against their own convictions in securing the repeal of the purchasing clause of the Sherman silver law, say that the veto of this bill will be accepted as proof positive by thousands of their constituents that President Cleveland is unalterably opposed to silver, and that the result would certainly be disastrous in the Congressional elections. Three members of the cabinet—Secretaries Gresham, Smith and Herbert—have advised Mr. Cleveland to sign the bill. It is believed that the delegation of New York bankers who are here asking that the bill be vetoed are adding to its chances of becoming a law. In fact, there has been a change in public opinion within a week, and a majority now believe that the bill will become a law, with or without the President's signature.

The revised tariff bill will be reported to the Senate this week, and the debate will begin Monday, April 2. This is authentic and official. No one can possibly regret the unexpected delay in getting the bill before the Senate more than the democratic members of the Finance committee do. They have worked until they are almost in a state of exhaustion, but fresh obstacles have constantly confronted them, and as they could not be avoided they had to be overcome. Since the bill has been before the full committee the republicans have taken advantage of every opportunity to add to the delay, and owing to the absence of Senator Vance, these opportunities have been frequent. The fact should not be forgotten by critically inclined democrats that when all of the members of the Finance committee are present the democrats have only one majority. With one democratic absentee the committee is a tie politically. It was the absence of Senator Vance that enabled the republicans on the committee to stave off the beginning of the debate until April 2.

Unless all indications are at fault the administration will soon start a programme that will cause the working democrats to enter the Congressional campaign with enthusiasm. I cannot without violating confidence enter into particulars, but if this programme be carried out the republicans who still remain in federal offices, outside the classified service, would better be looking around for new jobs, unless they have money enough to spend the summer in idleness. Those democrats who believed that the offices under a democratic administration should be filled by democrats will be pleased with some things that will occur in the near future, unless my information is wrong.

Representative Tucker, of Va., although not yet 41 years old, has a right to feel proud of the part he has taken in shaping the legislation of the present Congress. Although there were several other bills providing for the repeal of the federal election laws that were reported, passed and which became a law. Another compliment has just been paid the skill of Mr. Tucker by the House committee on the election of President and Vice President and Representatives in Congress, which selected his joint resolution providing for a Constitutional amendment for the election of Senators by direct vote of the people, although there were several others of a similar nature before the committee, to be favorably reported to the House.

The House has been working faithfully on the regular annual appropriation bills and it has been making a good record, both in the quantity of business done and in the amount of money appropriated—every appropriation has been reduced materially.

New York's Fish Market.

In all New York city there is only one wholesale fish market. It has a water and a street frontage adjoining the Fulton Ferry on the East River side of the city, and it is directly opposite the famous old Fulton Market. This season of the year is harvest-time in this industry, for when the Lenten period comes there is a rush of fishing smacks from all along the upper Atlantic coast to the market's dock. Thousands of crates and barrels of fish from the Great Lakes and the far South arrive; and the early hours of the morning, especially on Friday, with a blockade of streets for a radius of a quarter of a mile, take on an activity that is supposed to exist only in the summer when the peach season is at hand, and the truck farmers, with their teams and produce, turn night into day, and swarm over acres upon acres of New York's streets.

More picturesque is this night mart in winter than in summer. On the water side of the market, packed and wedged close in the dock, are the ice-coated vessels, the steamy vapor of the river rising in jets in the open spaces between the smacks and a score or more of temporary bridges running from deck to deck and thence to the piers, over which the fisherman and helpers, clad in oil-skin garb, rush the cargoes from hold to market stalls. Some of the catch brought in is alive, and is sent splashing and squirming with much confusion, shouting and calling, into the tanks that lie in the river close up to the market. Some of the catch is dead, frozen stiff, and this is quickly transferred to troughs and slabs and made presentable for sale. On the street side express wagons push and crowd up in the snow and slush, and the police have more than they can do to straighten out the tangle in the babel of shouting drivers. The horses steam like the river, and the electric lights shine through a night haze that is like an oncoming fog.—Harper's Weekly.

Gives Hood's the Credit.

Mr. Arch Kerr of the firm of Kerr Bros., furniture dealers, of Carmichael's, Pa., writes as follows: "We have used Hood's Sarsaparilla for a number of years for our son Alex, who has had scrofula which would gather two or three times a year. It has not gathered for the last two years and we give Hood's the credit."

Hood's Pills are purely vegetable and perfectly harmless. Sold by all druggists, 25c.

In China when a man owes a debt and the money is wanted, all the creditor has to do is simply to go and stand in front of the debtor's door and weep, and the debtor hustles around and gets the money and pays the bill to avoid disgrace. In this, as in all respects, American customs are nothing like those of China. Imagine one trying to work the tear racket in this country. It makes one laugh to think of it. A man might stand in front of a creditor's door and shed enough to water the streets of a town, but he would never have the chance to receipt the bill so far as shedding tears are concerned. We merely mention this as a matter of history, not as a suggestion for any of our readers to try it, because the chances are they will get knocked down with a club and want to hold us responsible for their injuries. One of our business men says that allowing a single tear to each house, he could not manufacture enough tears to go around in his case. But what shall we say? If we are to undertake to weep for our delinquents, the eyes of our entire force, even to the "devil," would soon be wept out.—Stroudsburg Times.

SOUTHERN FLOWERS.

BUREAU SOUTHERN NEWS, PINE BLUFF, N. C.

To persons travelling by rail through the sandy pine lands of the South, during the brown season of the year, the soil appears almost a desert, and incapable of producing a single plant of beauty or use. But this apparently worthless sand has hidden virtue and unseen properties from which spring beauties that show this desert blossoming as a rose. About April 1st, in many places, the ground is purple with the simple, sky-like beauty of the little anemone; sometimes called wood violet. In other places the arbutus after six weeks of bloom, is still covering the earth with its white, delicately pink-tinted bunches of fragrant flowers. In our boyhood, we used to think we were rich to find an arbutus bloom on May Day. We find it in the pinewoods and on this poor sand in February, and more than twice as large as the eagerly sought beauties of our youth. And right in our path where least expected, the violet in full bloom for our early Easter Sunday bids us stop and wonder how such a beauty can grow from this beach-like sand. These are the true violet; fragrant and purely colored by the same hand which tints the rainbow.

The wild pinks, or phlox, are coming. Soon the wonderful trumpet flower will come; the many varieties of the orchidaceae and the lilies. Grasses which will make and take color for delectful plumes six feet in height; and herbs eight feet in height. This sand produces few large and gorgeous flowers. But all justly claim, in form, tint, color and texture, the word beautiful in its highest sense. Their number in kinds and varieties is legion. From the middle of February to the middle of December when the lily clothes the earth with its royal purple, it is possible to cull a bouquet every day to grace our mantels and our dinner tables. A very little care gives us garden flowers throughout the year.

The flora of the Southern States may be considered as a transition, or intermediary, between the hardy but comparatively short lived flowers of the highest temperate zone, and the gorgeous and continuous beauties of the tropics. Its characteristics are such as to demand a distinct treatment scientifically. This has been recognized and a botany for the Southern States prepared. The importance of a correct knowledge and understanding of the flora of the South is recognized by the States themselves; some of them now support a State Botanist at a good annual salary. We have no doubt that many persons are ready to say "It is foolish to pay out our money to support a man just to pick and save flowers. What can he do to benefit the people generally?" If the State Botanist did nothing but to tell the people of his own state about their beautiful flowers, he would be in his services a public benefit. But he does more; he tells the people of other states about the beauty of his own. That helps to induce immigration. He does still more; for we must remember that every food producing plant, every fruit tree and every berry bush bears a flower. We believe God might have made these "without a flower at all." But he did not. He crowned them all with beautiful flowers which contain the promise of fruit. These flowers attract, almost compel the attention and study of mankind. This study finds out the nature of plant life and what it can do for mankind. It determines what plants are destructive to human life, and what are the supports of human life. It points out those which are useful in science, art, and in manufactures. The work of the botanist goes further and, in connection with the geologist, shows what plant life will thrive best on a given soil. The work of the botanist goes still further, and studies the foes to plant life; the habits, likes and dislikes of insects injurious and destructive to plant life.

The good state of North Carolina supports a cultured and learned State Botanist. And it is safe to say that the knowledge which he has spread among the people relative to the insect foes of the cotton plant is of more value in one year than the State will pay him for a whole life service. COMPOUND ENGINES.

DECLARED TO BE OF GREAT ADVANTAGE FOR RAILROAD PURPOSES.

Concerning the question of the economical use of compound engines for railroad purposes the Railroad Gazette says: "Two railroads that have been experimenting with compound locomotives for the past two years have reached the important conclusion that in freight service the compound locomotive, if reasonably well designed, will, without unusual care, effect a saving in fuel of fully 20 per cent. Most of the old prejudice against the compound mechanism is gone; it has been driven out by daily experience with the devices, accomplished in these two cases by shifting the compound from one division of the road to another, and finally leading to a recommendation to the management to consider the advisability of using compounds hereafter. Using 20 per cent. less fuel and water means less labor in several directions, and some considerable decrease in the cost of repairs to the boilers. The Compound Locomotive Committee, appointed by the Master Mechanics' Association several years ago, must have been discontinued last year, as there is no announcement of such a committee in the list given in the last "Proceeding." Such a committee would find more to report upon this year than it had last, and it is unfortunate that it was discontinued. Upon the revival of locomotive building it is probable that a larger percentage of compounds will be built than ever before; and in the near future the majority of all engines to be used exclusively on grades will undoubtedly be compounded, for reasons that we have often set forth.
