FORKS.

The necropolis of Zion's Church now presents a clean and tidy appearance. Instead of long grass growing over the mounds of the dead, it is shorn and cast away. We can now count the tombstones. Our enterprising citizens—some of them, at least—did the work on Saturday last. The cemetery is pleasantly located but is sadly in want of shrubbery and trees that would beautify the place. See to this in the Autumn.

There are two choice little groves of spruce and pine near Forks, from which could be culled elegant ornamental trees.

Wm. Kline lost a horse the other day; has bought another, and will now run a daily stage and mail to and from Shickshinny. His accommodations are excellent for passengers, and his home is very convenient and commodious for their comfort and entertainment, going or coming. Mr. Kline is popular with our community, and ever ready to serve it as occasion requires.

Jas. Ammerman still leads the van as fisherman.

Look out for a grand time at the festival, in E. M. Laubach's grove, on Saturday 7th, P. M. and evening. All should attend and patronize it for the benefit of the Sunday School of Zion's Church.

At present writing those delegated to visit the people and get them to Sunday School have not turned up as yet, very briskly. This move is in the right direction and should be attended to diligently.

We call the attention of our Supervisor to the lamentable condition of the road leading from Lewis's store toward Rhorsburg. It looks like the

WALLER.

Mr. F. D. Mendenhall, of Bloomsburg, is spending a week's vacation with his parents.

Elder Maltman, of Benton, conducted the funeral rites at the interment of Mrs. Robbins, who passed to the great beyond at the ripe old age of 82 years, and was laid to rest in the Waller cemetery Sunday afternoon.

Rev. Minsker, who has been suffering from rheumatism for several months, is still unable to get around and fill his appointments.

Children's Day was observed at Sylvan Chapel last Sunday. The exercises were largely attended and well rendered.

The visiting committee appointed by the Sunday School, paid their visits last Friday in this neighborhood. This is a new feature in religious work, but it seems to have the ring of true christianity about it. In order for one to get people interested in anything he must first be interested himself. If Sunday School workers would be as much interested as the proprietors of saloons and ball rooms, perhaps they would be as largely attended.

William Butt, of this place, and Abner Everhart, of Bloomsburg, were struck by lightning during the shower here on Sunday afternoon. They drove their horse under the shed of Samuel Kile's barn, and before they got out of the buggy the lightning struck the barn, hitting them and throwing them out of the buggy. Several holes were burned in their clothes. The electric current passed around Mr. Everhart's body, entering at the shoulder, burning the skin in straight lines like a flash of light. They remained unconscious but a short time, but were entirely helpless. Mr. Butt seemed to be the worst off and thought he was dying. They called for help but no one heard them. At last they managed to walk a little but would often become helpless and fall down, finding help at last, they sent near by to the church for their friends who were attending a funeral service, they soon had all the assistance that could be given and a few hours after Mr. Everhart claimed he felt pretty good. He had been visiting his parents during the day and was on his way to Bloomsburg when the shower overtook him.

They Are Not Dead But Sleeping.

Among the advantages of keeping awake, while other towns are asleep for political effect, comes Bloomsburg's recent promotion from the Post Office Department. The postmaster's salary being based upon the volume of postal business transacted, of course a town that is asleep for any cause will suffer financial reduction in many ways, and their loss will be the gain of places that can see no particular advantage in making hard times harder still. Bloomsburg has lost nothing by going right on with her varied business interests. But who with any regard for truth can say that Danville, Berwick, Towanda, or Sunbury has lost nothing by their closing up for political effect or in apprehension of unfavorable tariff legislation? So far as forestalling objectionable tariff legislation is concerned, they have perhaps won a temporary victory; but so far as revolutionizing the political sentiment is concerned—the sentiment that defeated the Republican party on the tariff issue—nothing but a general election can determine it. For it is well to remember that much, very much, of a demoralizing and disgusting commercial influence has transpired, through provoked strikes, &c., which is apt to unsettle and radically change the anticipated political effect hoped for through manufactured distress.

As between labor and our protected industries there has been an incessant warfare, the influence of which is not so easily outlived or obliterated as our favored ones who control our fostered and fattened industries may think. Of course the line of policy is to show that Democracy means distress, both financially and commercially, while the only hope of commercial and financial prosperity lies in and through the Republican party.

If our fostered and fattened industries, backed by the Republican party, can convince the sovereign power of the correctness of this notion and prove it by experience and by their practical demonstration of financial and commercial distress, we can see nothing in the way of their gaining the supremacy and holding it right along. And then surely the sovereign power owes a humble apology to the Republican party for the inglorious defeat it unwittingly gave it by electing Cleveland, a tariff reformer, whose winning promise was that he would reform the tariff if elected. If he tried and failed, was it because of Republican filibustering or of a Democratic sell-out? To divide the dishonor between the two parties will, we think, be about right. But so long as the sovereign power wants care for the innocent masses as against the cunning and selfish classes there will be need in this country for something besides the Republican party, and if the Democratic party would retrieve her lost prestige, there is a splendid opportunity right at hand. She has only to persist in standing by the masses as against the highly protected classes, and the God of fairness can but be with her in behalf of good government.

THE PULLMAN STRIKE.

Perhaps the most aggravated of all the recent strikes is that now made against the wealthy inventor of the Pullman sleeping and palace car. This strike has spread with avidity and with an ill-concealed vengeance, tying up a great deal of business completely and making it most difficult on the part of railroad manipulators to get new men to take the places of the strikers. George M. Pullman declares the strike of the car shop employees as unwarranted in justice, claiming to have done all that he could afford to do by his employees. "The matter," he says, "has now become a question as to whether the railroads of this country can operate their own property or not. Their independence of action is now at stake and they have determined that the question may as well be settled now as at some later time. This is the general disposition as I understand it."

In the important matter of tying up mail trains along with others, the strikers are quite apt to encounter the strong arm of the United States Government. They will find some difficulty in attempting to detach Pullman cars from mail trains where the trains are made up with a view to prevent it. Attorney General Olney holds that a train which carries the mail is a mail train, and of course to interfere with any particular car in that train will be an act bordering close upon treason against the U. S. Government. But the roads are certainly encountering serious difficulty in attempting to fill the places of strikers, the persuasion to quit being stronger it seems thus far than the persuasion or inducement to remain at work under the protest of their fellow-workmen. President Scanlon, of the labor union, said in regard to those who might choose to take the place of strikers, that they would be allowed to take trains out "but they will never come back," he ominously remarked. "We are in shape," he said, "to stop every car wheel except those under the United States mail cars." He said furthermore, "we are not fighting railroads. We are fighting Pullman. But when they make this cause theirs, then we will fight. I tell you we are on the verge of the biggest railroad strike in the history of America unless we gain our point. If we win there will never be another strike. If we lose, it means death to organized labor. The American Railway union know that the rank and file of all the brotherhood organizations are with us, regardless of the grand masters, and when we call on them to act you can set it down that they will do as we ask them."

"The use of 'Castoria' is so universal and its merits so well known that it seems a work of supererogation to endorse it. Few are the intelligent families who do not keep Castoria within easy reach." CARLOS MARTIN, D. D., New York City. "For several years I have recommended your 'Castoria,' and shall always continue to do so as it has invariably produced beneficial results." EDWIN F. PARKER, M.
