Foreign Pauper Labor.

Just as though that would settle the case and regain the lost prestige of the Republican party, the high protectionists of Pennsylvania are now wildly talking about a 300,000 Republican majority in Pennsylvania this fall. If with the aid of the foreigners in Pennsylvania who are engaged in mining coal and iron the Republicans of this State should carry it by 300,000 majority it would by no means obliterate the national education and aversion to high protective duties upon the necessities and commodities of life. If high protection on coal and iron means high wages to the foreigners who dig them out of the earth, as Republicans claim, what particular advantage is that to the American consumer who wants enough coal to keep warm in winter, or enough iron to shoe his horse with? Admitting that the foreigner is thus benefited, we are driven to wonder whether his gain is not the unprotected American's loss. It looks so.

Double Pay.

The celebrated Lexow investigation of New York city revealed the astounding fact that the city police were aiding and abetting all manner of criminals from the most proficient counterfeiter to the lowest prostitute. A division of the spoils was the requisite license fee for all manner of evil that was perpetrated without fear of arrest by the police. Thus the pay the police received from sneak thieves, burglars, green goods men, gamblers, cut throats and devils incarnate, on the one hand, and what they received as pay proper from the city authorities made their positions on the police force somewhat lucrative and filthy. If criminals are to be thus taxed and then exonerated by the police, then only the highest bidder for place on the police force should be accepted by the city authorities and all pay proper should cease for New York police certainly don't deserve double pay.

MARRIED A POOR CASH-GIRL.

A Boston Millionaire's Son Weds One of His Father's Emuloves.

Boston society was recently agog over the sensational marriage of Bert White, twenty-one years old, son of R. H. White, Boston's millionaire dry goods merchant, and Miss Lucy Bartlett, a sixteen-year-old cash girl, formerly employed in his father's big store. The couple went to New York Wednesday with the bride's married sister and husband, and were married next day.

The girl was recently discharged by the angry parent on learning of the love match, and the son was ordered out of the store and away from home. He went to New York, where he became traveling salesman for a cloak house. Having thus achieved independence, he was in a position to offer his hand, as well as his heart, to the girl of his choice.

THE ELECTION OF CONGRESSMEN.

Two years ago the friends of tariff reform elected ten of the thirty Congressmen of this State, and they were chosen on the distinct issue of revising our tariff laws in the interest of the people and against the interest of monopolies, trusts and favored classes. It was not a tidal wave of prejudice or passion that elected Mr. Cleveland President and chose a Democratic House and Senate. It was done after two years of the most thorough discussion of the subject by all classes of people, and the judgement of 1892 was rendered with as great deliberation as the people of the republic ever gave a national verdict.

Evil times came upon the country before the close of the Harrison administration. The Treasury, with over $60,000,000 of surplus when Cleveland retired in 1889, and with some $55,000,000 of the national bank trust fund transferred to the Treasury by act of Congress to arrest bankruptcy for a time, showed a deficit on the 4th of March, 1893, of about $54,000,000. Thus not only the revenues of the government during the Harrison administration, two years of which were under the highest tariff taxes ever known in peace, under the McKinley tariff, were all expended, but about $120,000,000 of surplus as well, and on the day that Secretary Carlisle entered the Treasury office he found an unsigned draft of his predecessor for $2,000,000 for a long overdue claim that could not be signed by Secretary Foster because he had not enough money to pay it.

With the surplus expended and the Treasury literally bankrupted by profligacy, the country was ill prepared to meet another great evil that came as a logical legacy from the Harrison administration. The credit of the government was strained to the uttermost by the silver policy of the former administration that had passed by an almost strictly partisan vote what was known as the Sherman law, requiring the purchase of silver monthly. Our credit became weakened abroad, our securities held in foreign countries were thrown upon our market, we were drained of our gold even when the balance of trade was in our favor, and before Harrison was fairly out of office the tide of disaster had set in and business and industrial paralysis were upon us. Labor was thrown into idleness, capital became unremunerative, commerce and trade became stagnant, and the last year has been one of the severest depression felt by every condition and class, all of which is the logical result of the legacy left us by the administration that was defeated so overwhelmingly in 1892.

People do not reason when they are suffering from bread, and the rule of politics is uniform that the party in power is certain of apparent popular condemnation when disaster comes upon the business interests of the country, regardless of what men or what party may be justly held responsible. Tens of thousands of idle laborers have been made to believe in their distress that the Wilson tariff had produced the misfortunes which have fallen upon them, but every one who thus teaches knows better, and however the voters may be misled this year the fraud must soon recoil upon its authors and give more signal triumph for honest taxation and equality in tariff laws.

Pennsylvania will choose her thirty Congressmen at the November election. It is the boast of those who favor unjust taxes upon the many for the benefit of the few that they will carry all but three of our Congressional districts against tariff reform. The Republicans cannot do so, but the Democrats may give them nearly all of the districts of the State if they shall choose to do so. The Berks and Lehigh and the Northampton districts will certainly elect Democrats, but it is altogether possible for the Democrats themselves to commit the suicide of giving the Republicans the Northumberland district by defeating Mr. Buckalew, the ablest man on any ticket in the State. The Cumberland, Adams and York district, the Clearfield district and the Luzerne, Lackawanna and Schuylkill districts can be thrown against tariff reform only by the Democrats themselves voting against their own candidates and against their own faith. What ever the result may be, not one of these districts is against tariff reform, but party demoralization and industrial distress may make even honest men wrong themselves.

Every voter of Pennsylvania should well consider the important issue of tariff reform and cast his vote resolutely for his convictions in the selection of Congressmen. There have been disgraceful faction feuds in some districts, but no friend of honest and equitable taxation should permit his personal prejudices or disappointments to sway him to cast his vote against his own convictions on the most vital question that is before the people and certainly one of the most vital questions that can come before them for years to come. Pennsylvania can elect two tariff reformers to the next Congress or it can elect eight, depending solely upon the integrity which the friends of tariff reform adhere to their convictions in casting their votes in November next.—Times.

Re (lie) able War News

If the war between China and Japan continues long, and if every battle, whether on land or water, continues to be won by the Japanese, the chances are that China, notwithstanding her numerical strength will get exterminated, and that Japan will control and sway all heatnendom in due course of time. We don't like to discredit cablegrams, and, being ourselves in the newspaper business, we hate to remark that newspapers have been known to lie in time of war, but we are, nevertheless, constrained to give it as our opinion that China is shooting back at the Japanese right along; and, as China also has some modern appliances to shoot with, we believe there is an occasional Japanese soldier killed also and an occasional Japanese boat sunk of which we fail to hear.
