

AUTUMN MILLINERY.

GREAT VARIETY IN SHAPE AND MATERIAL.

The Dubarry Hat—A Rage for Colors—Shapes are Eccentric—An Autumn Novelty—Style in Bonnets—Toques are Larger.

Nothing could be more charming than the display of hats and bonnets for fall wear shown at the leading millinery establishments. Where so many beautiful things are to be seen it is difficult to particularize, and the disposition is to study novelties rather than accepted forms.

The Dubarry Hat.

It has bunches of Mountain ash berries on the brim, and nestling under the brim, which is slightly turned up and veiled in the glittering lace.

The rage is now for colors, but correct taste would dictate that these should be toned down. This is done with pretty effect by the added touches of black which Dame Fashion insists should be used.

Shapes are apparently more eccentric than ever. Hats and bonnets are so varied in shape and trimming that it is impossible to give an idea of the wealth of ideas used. Apparently every style of face has been studied. The Padre shape, with large brims and low crowns, is considerably affected for general wear. Felts, however, are worn in all shapes. One of the autumn novelties is a black French felt hat trimmed with one high loop of black crepe, and two smaller loops of hatters' felt, with a crane cord at bottom of loops, the rim being edged with felt rings. It has a very pretty effect.

There is a decided tendency to mass the trimming at the back in the flat back effect prevailing in both hats and bonnets. Long plumes are arranged as to fall upon the hair in the Rembrandt style.

In bonnets jet effect are quite prominent. The small jet bonnet here shown has a twist of combined white and yellow velvet inside the flaring narrow brim, at the front, expanding into a bow of short loops and erect pointed ends, to which jet wings are added. A mass of shaded yellow velvet blossoms droop low at the back.

Toques are larger than they have been for some time and fit the head much better; they are trimmed mostly with black aligrettes, winks or birds, and are made of satin-soliel to match or contrast with the toilette.

Buckles and slides are quite as much used as during the summer and bid fair to continue popular as the season advances. Many of them are delightfully fantastic in shape, and all are brilliantly set with glittering rhinestones and other jewels. Cut steel are amongst the prettiest of the plainer varieties.

Striped ribbons in two colors to harmonize with the velvet or felt are charming upon large hats. The ends are usually fringed. Bonnets are worn without strings, but have ample bows of velvet or silk ribbon. Satin and taffeta, faille and even moire is sometimes seen, the favorite colors being periwinkle, blue, rubis and jacinthe.

Leaves, by the way, are a special feature in trimming. Lilac, geranium, clover and other leaves cut out of felt are formed into bonnets and toques. Leaves are also made of ostrich feathers, pheasants' breasts and peacocks' plumage. Those made of ostrich feathers are perfectly flat and beautifully frosted.

BRIDE WHO MADE A RASH VOW

Which She Could Not Be Induced to Break Until Her Husband Had Broken a Vase. This story is told in the St. Paul Dispatch. Mrs. Jerry Cartell, of near Trimble, Tenn., has just broken a rash vow which she made over twelve months ago, and which she sorrowfully regretted having ever made. About eighteen months ago Mrs. Cartell was Miss Fannie Bramley, a beautiful young lady of eighteen years, and Jerry Cartell was her favored suitor. But, as is generally the case with young lovers, a quarrel arose between them, and in the heat of passion Miss Fannie angrily bade her lover to leave her presence, and vowed by high heaven she would never speak to him again. The desolate lover took his departure, but, as he fairly worshipped the girl, he ardently set out to effect a reconciliation. At last, in answer to a pitiful, pleading letter, Miss Fannie relented and penned him a loving, forgiving message.

Overjoyed at the happy termination of affairs, he hurried to the home of Miss Fannie, and was received warmly and affectionately, but without a word of welcome. Taking a tablet and pencil from a desk, she began a written conversation as though she could not speak a word. Cartell pleaded the uselessness and foolishness of such proceedings, but in vain, as his sweetheart positively refused to utter a word to him. She is very devout, a member of the Methodist church, and was firmly impressed with the idea that if she should break her rash vow God would punish her by striking her dumb, when she could speak to no one. She was constantly on her guard, for fear she might forget and speak to her lover, thereby bringing this terrible visitation upon her.

The courtship proceeded with pencil and paper for several months, when they were joined together in the holy bonds of matrimony. During their married life of a year Mrs. Cartell never spoke to her husband until some days ago.

Last Christmas Mr. Cartell made his wife a present of a handsome and costly pair of vases. Recently the husband was bringing in an armful of wood and struck one of the vases and knocked it to the floor and broke it into 100 different pieces.

"Oh, Jerry, look what you have done!" cried Mrs. Cartell. She was horribly shocked at speaking to her husband, and believed that she had been stricken dumb. To ascertain the correctness of her belief she spoke to him again, and was overjoyed to discover that her organs of speech had not been in the least impaired.

In the happiness of hearing his wife speak, Jerry thanked God for the breaking of the vase.

He frowned. "Then you refuse my proffered suit?" "Yes." "Do you wish to shake my faith in woman?" "I wish to shake everything," she answered, with a sweeping gesture, the significance of which could not be mistaken.—Detroit Tribune.

A Superfluous Question.

Fair Cyclist—Can you tell me the way to Wareham, please? Honest Farmer—Well, miss, I guess you knows the way to wear 'em much better nor me.—London Sketch.

The Unfettered Press. "Now, Mr. Pansmith," said the able editor, addressing his newly-engaged assistant, "you will make your leaders pithy, forcible, and above all things, timely. When you have occasion to strike, deal stunning blows straight from the shoulder; here must be no mincing matters, sir; no compromising with evil; no palliation of abuses, you understand."

"Exactly, sir," was the reply; "I intend, first, to expose the corruption existing in the municipal government I propose to show up the rotten—"

"Ah—yes! But—er—er—we do the city printing, and—well, you see—"

"H'm! It is also my intention to touch upon the laxity of our divorce laws, and the manner—"

"Well—er—er—Col. Corker, the uncle of the young man who recently eloped with his sister-in-law, and is now suing for divorce on the grounds of emotional insanity, owns stock in this paper, and—you know—"

"Er—ah! I see! Well, then, a triumphant outburst about the present prosperity of our city and the glorious prospects for future—"

"Old Hunkle, who owns this building, would raise the rent at once."

"H'm! Let me see! In to-morrow's issue I will dwell at considerable length on the futility of attempting to make a silk purse out of a sow's ear; upon the following day, prove beyond controversy that the Prophet Elijah was stuck on himself; and on Thursday I'll draw a melancholy picture of the awful loneliness of the last white rhinoceros in Central Africa."

"By Jove, Mr. Pansmith! Just follow out that line, let the chips fall where they may, and I'll double your salary next month."—Puck.

PORTABLE POULTRY FENCE.

It Can Be Taken Down or Set Up Quickly. The fence shown in the illustration herewith is light, strong, durable, four feet high, self-locking and can be made for two and a half cents per running foot. Fig. 1 is a section of one panel, and Fig. 2 of another, both in position to be joined together as in Fig. 3 making a continuous fence. Notice that the top and bottom boards in Fig. 1 are in front of the uprights, and in Fig. 2 behind them, while the middle boards are exactly the reverse. When the ends of the panels are joined, as in Fig. 3, they fit tightly and support each other. By turning the panel Fig. 2 over it will be the same as Fig. 1, and they will not hitch, as may be seen. In turning a corner the projecting end of the middle board is sawed off, and notches cut in the ends of top and bottom boards, as shown in Fig. 4, and when joined together they support each other and the corner is firm. Fig. 5 is a standard to support the fence in place of posts. It is made of one by three inch boards four feet long, cut as shown in engraving, and fastened together by a single one-fourth inch bolt. The top board of the panel rests in the notch at the top. About one to each panel should be used, and it may be placed near the end or centre, as desired. The fence is best made in panels two feet long. In each panel there are three pieces, one by two inches, twelve feet long, three pieces one by two inches, four feet long, and twenty-eight to thirty-two pieces of lath. When made of fairly good clear stuff it is strong and light, and can be taken down or set up quickly. It is equally available for inclosing spent gardens, fruit patches, plots of weeds, grass or brush or any other spot that chickens or ducks can clean up and fertilize."

POINTS ON FOWLS.

Understand the preferences of your market. Boston and Philadelphia prefer eggs with yellow shells, New York gives the preference to white eggs. Some markets prefer poultry undrawn while in other markets such poultry would not be saleable at all. There are cities where it would be a surprise to ask for a hundred systems as they are sold entirely by the quart or gallon. Never ship goods to a market unless you know something of the customs of the city.

It is not pleasant work to dip a lot of hens in order to rid them of lice, says Farm and Fireside. The best substance to use are some of the well-known sheep dips. The hens should be held by the legs, heads down, with one hand holding the head. Dip them with the head under first, and let the solution cover every portion of the body, not even the toes excepted. Pull them to and fro in the tub two or three times and set them free. It should be done only on warm, clear days.

M. Bourneuf recommends in a French journal the following method of preserving eggs: Dissolve in two-thirds of warm olive oil, one-third of beeswax and cover each egg completely with a thin layer of this pomade with the end of the finger. The egg shell by degrees absorbs the oil, and each of the pores become filled with the wax, which hermetically seals them. M. Bourneuf affirms that he has eaten eggs kept two years in this manner, in a place not exposed to too great extremes of temperature. He thinks also that the germ may in this manner be preserved for a considerable time.

The Land of Ducks.

There are more ducks in the Chinese Empire, says an authority, than in all the world outside of it. They are kept by the Celestials on every farm, on the private roads, on the public roads, on streets of cities and on all the lakes, ponds, rivers, streams and brooks in the country. Every Chinese boat also contains a batch of them. There are innumerable hatching establishments all through the Empire, many of which are said to turn out about 50,000 young ducks every year. Salted and smoked ducks and duck's eggs constitute two of the most common and important articles of diet in China.

1,000 Guineas for a Pair of Horses.

What is the highest price ever given for a pair of carriage horses? That of Mr. Arthur E. Evans, J. P., of Bronwylla, Wrexham, have just fetched a thousand guineas. They rejoice in the names of the "Duke of York" and "Lord Bath," and have won some hundred first-class prizes, three having been awarded them at the Dublin Horse Show.

The Cute Bees of Brazil.

The bees of Brazil hang their combs outside on the branches of trees at the very summit and at the end of the slenderest twigs to be out of the reach of monkeys.

Fashionable Livery.

The well known horseman has opened a fashionable livery in connection with his boarding stable at the Exchange Hotel Stables, where fine turnouts can be obtained, single or double. He has well broken and safe saddle and driving horses for ladies, all at reasonable rates. Orders left at the Exchange Hotel will receive prompt attention. Drivers furnished when desired. W. A.
