OLEVELAND'S WARNING.

HE WRITES A LETTER TO GOVERNOR STONE OF MISSISSIPPL

The Welfare of the Party Demands That the Democracy Stand on the Traditional Doctrine of Sound and Safe Money.

Governor Stone on Friday evening gave to the newspapers a letter addressed to him by President Cleve land, under date of April 26. The following is a full text of the letter:

My DEAR SIR-Your letter of the 21st inst. is at hand. I do not feel inclined to find fault with your criticism, but I think the matters you time the things were done. If there are Democrats who suppose that our party can stand on a platform embodying such doctrine, either through its affirmative strength or through the perplexity of our opponents on 'he same proposition, or if there are Democrats who are will ing to turn their backs upon their party associations in the hope that free and un imited and independent coinage of silver can win a victory without the aid of either party organi zation, they should deceive themselves no longer, nor longer refuse to look in the face the results that will follow the defeat if not the disintegration of the Democratic party upon the issue which tempts them from forced away from our traditional docthe platform which we abandon, and neither the votes of reckless Demo

CLAIMS REOPENED.

Adverse Decision of the Commissioner of Pensions Overruled.

A decision of much importance to children claiming under the general law has been rendered by Assistant Secretary John M. Reynolds, whereby the action of the Commissioner of Pensions is overruled, and the practice prevailing prior to such adverse decision of the Commissioner is resumed. This will operate to reopen a great number of claims for minor's pension under the general law that have been rejected during the past 15 months upon the ground that the refer to should be judged in the light children claimed for were over the of the circumstances existing at the age of 16 years at date of filing the application for pension. This decision has no bearing upon claims filed ing a personal following, but so far under the act of June 27, 1890. The case on which the decision is made me in making appointments I have is that of the children of Thomas W. Baugher, Co. A. 29th Ill., (No 510,scriptive. TISSOT'S PICTURES.

RESULT OF HIS VISIT TO PALESTINE TO STUDY THE LIFE OF CHRIST.

Interesting Story of the Conversion of a Famous French Painter-The Picture Which Was "the Father of the Brood"-"From the Top of the Cross."

Theodore Stanton in The Century tells the strange story of the conversion of M. James Tissot, the French painter whose 300 or 400 pictures illustrating the life of Jesus formed one of the most interesting features of the 1894 Champ de Mars salon.

Seven or eight years ago artistic Paris talked for a day of the departure of Tissot for the Holy Land in order to seek new inspirations. Tissot was then fresh in the public mind as the author of a series of etchings depicting the passions, charms and seductions of feminine life at the French capital, and many an artist smiled skeptically at this apparent contradiction. Yet Tissot had already shown more than once that his talent had a bent in the direction of religious subjects.

Then, too, at the very moment when he was engaged in packing his trunk for Palestine he had in his studio a carefully hidden canvas, scarcely dry, which was so penetrated with a subtle spiritual and Christian spirit that its timid author dared not exhibit it in public. It now forms the center of the Tissot collection at the Champ de Mars, where it is exposed for the first time. I refer to a large oil painting called "The Voices Within," wherein are represented a poor man and his wife, who, fallen into deep despair in the midst of poverty and ruin, finally take new heart and courage through the consolation of Jesus, who appears to them, comforts them and shows them his pierced hands. "That was the starting point of my new dispensation," said M. Tissot, pointing to this picture the first time I saw it, "but I had a long and hard struggle before I could bring myself to be gin it. More than one night did I lie swake for hours, till my head was burning through the mental strain, struggling against the admission into my heart of the new light that was dawning upon me. But when I finally felt myself conquered and was penetrated through and through by the grand mystery of a God turned man in order to save humanity I could no longer escape from it. So, of course, this large painting must go to the Champ de Mars, for it is really the father of all this big brood of little ones.' With such thoughts in his mind and such awakenings in his heart, in the autumn of 1886 Tissot started for the holy sepulcher with all the enthusiasm of the crusaders of old. He saw, questioned and meditated. He made scores of vivid sketches and wrote reams of thoughtful notes. The first visit was repeated. During this second sojourn he utilized instan-taneous photography, which was then first becoming known in France, and was thus able to bring back with him quantities of characteristic types, scenes and landscapes. The farther he wandered in Palestine the more he saw there, and the deeper he studied his object the stronger grew Tissot's conviction that his precursors in the field of Biblical illustration had not caught the true spirit of their scheme, had not struck the right note. He returned to France determined to catch the true spirit and to strike the right note. Once within the walls of Paris again he buried himself in his handsome, secluded home, situated at the head of a quiet lane within a stone's throw of the Bois de Boulogne, and gave himself up entirely to his thoughts, his books, his collections and his art. He pored over musty old commentaries on the Bible, studied archæology, mastered the Talmud, devoured books of eastern travel read the history of the Jews and Arabs and went over the Scriptures again and again in the Vulgate and in the French and English translations. Nor did he neglect the Apocrypha. In a word, before taking up his brush Tissot saturated his mind with his subject and gave full rein to an imagination now thirsting for the occult and mysterious. Society lost its charms for him. He who had been a mon-

dain now became almost a recluse.

Emphasis must be laid on the fact that Tissot, in the enthusiasm of a neophyte, has not simply gone back to the antiquat-ed treatments of religious subjects. Herein lies perhaps the chief merit of his col-lection. His originality may often border on profanity, but never crosses the line. His innovations in the handling of old familiar themes frequently take the breath away when the beholder is of the cloth An ecclesiastic who has carefully studied the collection declares that in his rendering of the passion Tissot has introduced numerous details that had never before occurred to the clerical mind, and yet that none of these new departures is contrary to orthodoxy and in no respect mars the emotion produced by the scene.

Tisset's series of "portraits" of the apostles is a mixture of archeological. ethnological, phrenological and historical data welded together by reverence, art and talent. They are sure to startle-that of St. Peter, for instance—a priest at the first glance, but the work will win respect and admiration at the second, for Tissot has a reason for all, even for the color of a garment, the form of a hood or the style of the fastening of a sandal. One of the visitors has remarked concerning this remarkable gallery of saints that the artist has not flattered his subjects. There is nothing wonderful about these poor fishermen, he says, nothing in their plain attire or everyday physiognomy to awaken awe. "But you feel that these are indeed the men whom Jesus inspired." In a word, Tissot's creations are pure realism tempered by sincere faith.

Perhaps the boldest of the pictures of pure imagination is that which he has named, "What Jesus Saw From the Top of the Cross." In the first place, you see no cross. The spectator stands where the Christ should be, and this, in the words of the note, is what meets his eyes: "At the foot, weeping and burning with divine love and repelitence, is Mary Magdalene; his mother, with her look of ineffable tenderness; St. John, buried in profound devotion, and many holy women bathed in tears. A little farther back are the blasphemers, the haters and the timid. Staring him in the face is the sepulcher which is to receive his body that very night. Farther back are timorous disciples, who approach that they may have a final glance at the Master before night hides all from view. The fainting Lord can just hear the murmur of the distant city and the low blare of the trumpets at the temple regulating the crowd according to the order of the sacrifices."

BELLAIRE, O., May 7 .- It is believed here that the great strike of 1893 will be duplicated. Yesterday the mines working on the co-operative plan and those work ing at the sixty cent rate were all ordered out, and now 7,000 men are idle. No trouble has occurred.
