from our Regular Correspondent-

WASHINGTON, June 28, 1895.

No member of the administration akes any stock in the predictions being made in some quarters concerning the probable early run that will be made on the gold in the Treasury, now that the bond syndicate has made its last payment on account of bonds purchased. On the contrary, members of the administration consider the outlook very cheerful. The Treasury now has a little more than $100,000, ooo in gold, and officials do not expect during this year, and their confidence great and small, at the festivities. has a solid foundation. Gold only goes to Europe when somebody can profit by its shipment. The season navies, and the striking feature of this for the shipment of our agricultural celebration of one of the victories of products to Europe is now almost any gold over for some time. Besides, unless all the big financiers are mis-There is no good reason for the direful predictions which have followed payment on those bonds this week, of a great many rifles. instead of waiting until next October, as their contract allowed them to do. the Treasury.

Secretary Olney is thinking very seriously of applying competitive examination methods to the U. S. Consular service, so far as their nomination to office is concerned, of course they would have to take their chances of being confirmed by the Senate after naval vessels is an experience not depassing the examination and getting nominated. It is admitted by all travelers that the longer a consul remains in office the more useful he becomes to the country he represents, and European governments never think of removing a consul, except for cause. Secretary Olney, in addition to the examination of consuls, would like to see the service placed on a permanent basis, so that young men would take it up as a life career.

Much significance is attached by republicans to an interview with Representative Cannon, of Illinois, which was published in Washington this week. It wasn't what Mr. Cannon said that attracted attention, as his talk is not considered important-he does too much of it-, but what he didn't say. He occupied nearly a column discussing the Presidential possibilities of his party, mentioning Reed, who he is supposed to favor, McKinley, Allison, Morton, Cullom and even "Cush" Davis, but leaving and even "Cush" Davis, but leaving red dollars for any case it fails to cure. out Mr. Benjamin Harrison, notwithstanding that gentleman's recent attempts to have himself considered the leading candidate for the nomination. As Mr. Cannon has just returned from an eastern trip his interview may be part of a plan of the Reed men to kill the Harrison boom by ignoring it. Great interest is felt in Washington in the change of administration in England, because of the bearing it may have on the silver question in this country. Lord Salisbury, the new premier, is friendly to silver and Mr. Balfour, a member of the new cabinet, has a parliamentary record as a bimetallist of the most advanced type. It is natural therefore that hopes should be indulged that England might change her policy of opposition to silver and join in a movement for international bimetallism. It is just as well, however, to remember when indulging in such hopes that in England the national finances have never figured as an issue in politics, and that, unless there is a radical upheava! of precedent, the personal opinions of Lord Salisbury and Mr. Balfour will not be sufficient to change the financial policy of that country. It is quite certain, however, that if the coming parliamentary elections shall result in favor of the conservative party, to which the new cabinet belongs, that a strong effort will be 1492?" made by the silver men of Europe and America to get England to declare in favor of bimetallism. But all previous efforts in that line have been balked by the mighty influence of the financiers of Lombard street, who forced the adoption of the gold standard and who will fight silver to the last ditch.

From Harper's Weekly.

The Baltic and North Sea Canal is an admirable triumph of engineering skill and a gain to the commerce of all seafaring nations. For this alone its formal opening would deserve to be fitly celebrated, but its chief claim to the world's regard should be its value in saving human lives now lost in the stormy channels and winding fog-bound straits that it cuts off. Its service to humanity outranks its service to commerce, and it deserves the recognition of its importance that will that amount to be materially reduced from fourteen of the earth's powers,

The Warring Republican Factions.

There is a big storm brewing in the Pennsylvania Republican camp. The In all the wide range of creation clouds have been gathering ever since there is nothing which approaches the inauguration of the present State Niagara Falls in magnificence of administration, and the thunder and grandeur, nor any other object which lightning is already playing through inspires the beholder with such awe the Republican atmosphere in the inspiring wonder. This crack in the organization has widened into a split that has become broad enough to separate the party in the State into two warring camps. The enemies of Quay are arranging each direction, and at Buffalo on the themselves under the leadership of Chris Magee, Congressman Dalzell, Dave Martin, Charley Porter and Chairman Gilkeson, who have the assurance that Hastings and his administration will give their influence to their faction. To meet, and if possi-ble, conquer these insurrectionists, the boss is bestirring himself, and is having the support of the Penrose contingent in Philadelphia, besides such rural yoeman as Lieut. Gov. Lyon, ex-Lieut. Gov. Watres, Auditor General Mylin, Senators Andrews, Mc-Carrell and Kennedy, Representative Lytle, and others who have long and faithfully worn his collar.

The fight is a most important one for the boss, and as an indication that there is to be no comprise with rebels, announces himself as a candidate for the chairmanship of the Republican State Central committee. The immediate object of contention between the opposing factionists, is the control of the coming State Convention and the manipulation of the state delegation to the next Republican National Convention. Quay well knows that if that power is taken from him he might as well surrender his commission as state boss and acknowledge Chris Magee and Dan Hastings to be bigger ducks in the Republican puddle than he is.

The culmination of this storm will be in the next State Convention, and the Democrats can prepare themselves to enjoy the fun .- Bellefonte Watch-
