ance. In my work in Africa I have found that my women missionaries as a whole have more endurance than the men. They are sensible women who do not violate the laws of health in what they wear ; and the manner in which they have kept at work which has broken men down proves, I think, that women are equal, if not superior, to their masculine co-workers in staying power and general strength of constitution when the conditions are equally favorable. The wearing by women of the loose trousers while bicycle riding is a distinct step toward making the conditions equal, and therefore I should examine the question as to whether women shall wear bloomers or not with a decided leaning toward the affirmative side. Unless the costume is immodest or unwomanly I should advocate its adoption.

The question as to the unwomanliness is largely one of individual taste.

Personally I do not consider the costume objectionable. It is appropriate for the wheel, and a manifestation of an increased freedom and a larger sphere for women, which I am glad

MISERY OF MAL DE MER.

h i ave No Regard for Conaronality.

Bishop Potter is credited with telling the story which, more aptly than the thousands of other stories on the tains subject, illustrates the abject misery and utter irresponsibility of Seasickness:

"I was coming from Liverpool upon one of the famous liners," says Bishop Potter "and although the sky was clear and the weather warm, a somewhat tempestuous sea had occasioned more than the usual amount of seasickness among the passengers. As I paced the deck one afternoon I noticed a lady reclining upon one of the benches, and the unearthly pallor of her face and the honeless languidity of her manner, indicated that she had reached that state of collapse which marks the limit of seasickness.

"Touched by the piteous spectacle, I approached the poor creature, and in my most compassionate tone I asked. 'Madam, can I be of any service to 3'04?

"She did not open her eyes, but I heard her murmur faintly, 'Thank you, sir, but there is nothing you can do-orthing at all." "'At least, madam,' said I, tenderly, permit me to bring you a glass of water."

"She moved her head feebly, and answered, 'No. I thank you-nothing at all.'

'But your husband, madam,' said 1, 'the gentleman lying there with his head in your lap-shall I not bring something to revive him?"

"The lady again moved her head feebly, and again she murmured faintly and between gaps, 'Thank you, sir, but-he-is-not-my-husband. I--don't-know-who-he-is"

GROWING PORK FOR BACON.

Methods That Are Employed by Virginia Farmers.

To have good bacon, we must first secure a good pork of which to make it. It may be hald down as an incon-trovertible truth that good pork cannot be made of swill and slops alone. It is not by indiscriminate stuffing of an animal conduced in a pen that sound pork is produced. Not by any sort of forcing process whatever, that converts a pig into a muss of spongy blubber, fit only for sonp grease, can good, sweet, solid pork be made, that will cure into good bacon and remain good through the heat of summer. It re-quires solid muscle, firm flesh, marbled by "a streak of lean and a streak of fat," to make ham and bacon such as we have in the country homes of Eastern Virginia and elsewhere. Not by a course of cramming, then, that lays on fat at the expense of muscle and flesh is the relevance of muscle flesh, is the right sort of pork and made that one can transform into good, firm bacon. A growing hog needs exercise and should, as far as may be practicable, follow a natural life, and be allowed to develop into a natural animal. Not in a "four-square" pen, surrounded by mud and filth daily and all the time, can a pig on-joy those conditions that will enable it to form marbled flesh, that marks the golden mean between too much lean on the one hand, and too much blubber on the other. The pig likes to use its legs and its shout, and it should have room to indulge those in-stincts. Pigs that are growing for stincts. pork should, as the different crops of the farm will allow, have the range of a pasture, where they may have grass and be permitted to given the orchards and grain fields. Nor are the largest hogs the best for bacon. Hogs that are never wintered-spring pigs that go into pork at nine or ten months of age-are the cheapest and best for good bacon. It is even better to con-vert six months' pigs-those farrowed in June or July-into bacon in Decouber than to keep them over another year. If farmers would have rye and clover for the pigs in early spring and sum-mer, and have orchards or nut-tree ranges where they could run when the fruit is failing and sow field peas, or plant peanuts where the animals could in autumn, they would be enabled to raise pork at very small cost, and, with corn or meal to finish them off, would get meat that would be firm of flesh, marbled, and fit for the best of bacon.-R. W. Jones, Virginia.

The wearing of bloomers and knickerbookers is evidently likely to produce some new social distinctions. According to a Liverpool paper, a young man was arrested recently in that city, charged with kissing a woman against her will, in the public highway. The prisoner pleaded that she was in bloomers, and that he mistook her for a long-lost brother. The magistrate discharged him. The editor cruelly adds that the demand for bloomers has shown a remarkable increase.

"What's the matter," asked the juvenile.

'My father is dead," answered the leading man, in a heart-broken volce. The juvenile expressed his sympathy.

'When did he die?" he asked.

"Last week. We buried him to-day -a nice funeral," answered the heart-
