"In the Foot-Hills" was produced at the Academy of Music last evening before a large audience. The play is in four acts, and the scene laid in Colorado during 1873, thereby allowing plenty of opportunity for startling situations, daring adventures and exciting episodes. The play has strong merits. It is ably interpreted by Orson Clifford, who by the way is well known in this city. His support is the best seen at the Academy for a long while. The audience was brimful of enthusiasm, and the play was given with remarkable smoothness. Curtain calls were given at the end of each act. Mr. Clifford received a number of handsome floral pieces from the body of Knights of Pythians which turned out to greet their brother member.—Chicago Herald, Feb. 5th, 1895.

There are plays without number, to be sure, of all sorts and descriptions, but the one now on the Standard, "In the Foot-Hills," and which received its first representation at that theatre last evening, is the best I have ever seen. Mr. Orson Clifford as Hank Saxton, the hero, is at home in his character, and physically and otherwise gives a magnificent rendition of his role. The cast was all that could be expected, and included some faces well known in Philadelphia.—Philadelphia Item, Dec. 26th, 1894.

The new comedy drama, entitled "In the Foot Hills," was presented for the first time at the Star Theatre last evening. The house was packed from pit to dome and the audience proved enthusiastic. The scene of the play is laid in Colorado during the year 1873, and the plot is strictly original, is full of exciting as well as entertaining situations. The company is A No. 1, headed by the young Brooklyn favorite, Mr. Orson Clifford.—Brooklyn Times, Jan. 15th, 1895.

"In the Foot Hills" will be at the Opera House Friday, Sept. 27.

Sunday School Institute.

The Sunday School Institute held at Espy last week was a success in every particular. The exercises were in charge of J. C. Creveling District President and the Methodist Church in which it was held was crowded. The praise service was conducted by F. B. Hartman of this place assisted by Mr. Purman. The orchestra of the Y. M. C. A. were present and added greatly to the pleasure of the occasion. The program which consisted of addresses by Rev. B. C. Conner, and Rev. P. A. Heilman were interspersed with music by the male Quartette, a solo by Miss Vida Miller and one by O. H. Yetter. About thirty-five of the Sunday School workers of this place were present.
