Peculiarities and Famous Gueses of the

The old imperial town of Rogensburg. Ratisbon as we call it, is in these days comparatively little visited by the tourist. For one Anglo-American visitor who stops at Regensburg fifty make a point of seeing Nurnberg. Yet Nurnberg has of late become a busy smoky manufacturing town, the hotbed of Socialism and the home of labor disputes, while Regensburg, a couple of hours further down the line still retains its mediaeval character its ancient customs, and its Old World hospitality. This fine South German city on the Danube, in days gone by the seat of the Imperial Diet, the political capital of that historic empire which Voltaire declared to be "neither holy nor Roman," is the possessor of the oldest inn in Europe. Those who have to lodge beneath the roof which has sheltered royalty will find in the Golden Cross at Regensburg a resting place after their own hearts. No other "guest house" in Europe, for the Golden Cross scorns the modern title of hotel, can boast of such a royal clientele, and no other inn possesses records dele, and no other inn possesses records of such great antiquity. It was in an apper chamber of the Golden Cross that Kaiser Karl V., "on whose empire the sun never set," rested from cares of politics and theology in 1646; and it was here, too, that the future victor of Lepanto, Don John of Austria, was born a year later—the offspring of the wayward Kaiser and the bewitching barmaid of the Golden Cross, Barbara Blombergh. A medallion of Don John now adorns the wall of his birthplace and a choice inscription, by a local antiquary, tells how Kaiser Karl "kissed a maiden's lips," and how his son grew up to be "the comfort and the safeguard of Christendom" from the Turkish hosts which threatened it But, even before Don John was born or thought of, the Golden Cross had made a name for fiself in the world.

During the present century the record of royal guests is most remarka-ble. The visitors' books, which date from 1819, contain the names of more than 500 imperial, royal and princely personages, and some pages read like extracts from the first part of the "Almanach de Gotha." The late cook of the Golden Cross used to say that during forty years' service she had tickled almost every royal palate in Europe. Among the guests were King Frederick William IV. of Prussia and his Queen, the old Kaiser William, who was frequently there; the Emperor and Empress of Austria, the latter of whom stops at the Golden Cross whenever she comes to see her sister; the Princess of Thurn and Taxis, the Empress of Brazil, the late Emperor Frederick and his consort, the King and Queen of Saxony, the ex-King of Hanover, Wurtemberg, the Tsarina Alexandra of Russia, the late Emperor Napoleon III., who came here as a boy with his father in 1823 and again in 1824 on his way from Corsica, and every member of the Bavarian royal family for three generations back. It was while stop-ping at the Golden Cross that the Emperor of Austria received the fatal telegram announcing the death of his ill-starred brother, the Emperor Maximillian of Mexico, at Queretaro in 1867; and, by a curious yet melancholy coincidence, poor Maximillian had spent his honeymoon ten years earlier in the same inn. They showed us with pride the room where in 1865 Prince Bismarck, at that time Prussian Premier, slept, when he came with his sovereign and a retinut of officials to hold the well-known A sudden squall struck the vessel. "Conference of Ministers," which was the last attempt to prevent the fratricidal war between Austria and Prussia. The negotiations were held in the "small hall" of the inn, under the presidency of King William of Prussia. The room is now adorned with portraits of the six most distinguished guests of the establishment, but the Bismarck bedroom has been preserved just as it was thirty years ago. Equally proud is our host of the autographs of Schiller and other men of letters which he possesses. The author of "Wilhelm Tell" wrote the words "und eine Helmath ist es" ("It is indeed a home") in memory of his stay at the inn, and no landlord could wish for a better advertisement. The last great rejoicing which took place at the Golden Cross was in August, 1890, when the Prince Regent of Bavaria and the whole Bavarian royal family celebrated there the birthday of the first King Ludwig of Bavaria, who founded the Walhalla, near Regensburg, in mem-ory of Germany's mighty dead. In honor of this day the host affixed a fine relief of King Ludwig to his walls, where it now divides with the older medallion of Don John the attention of every stranger as he passes by Fortunately, the Golden Cross has proserved its quaint old architecture and its sweet simplicity, in spite of the distinguished patronage which it has enloyed for so many centuries. More wonderful still it has retained its former moderate scale of charges. This "resting place of Emperors and Princes" is no parvent of pot-house yesterday, a palace to-day. It affects surprise whenever, as once happened, a sovereign Prince arrives in Regens burg and is so missatord as to choose some other hotel as his night quarters. But it does not despise the humble middle-class traveler because it has numbered the courts of Europe among its customers. The building is a per feet hit of the Middle Ages. The old German Weinstube has not changed since the days when the pedantic statemen of the Holy Roman Empire unbent there over their cups of good Rhenish after the day's quibbling in the gloomy hall of the Diet was over The fine, lofty tower, from which you can see the whole of red-roofed Regensburg at your feet and the Danube meandering away toward the Walhalla in the distance, stands four-square, as it did in the time of poor Barbara Blombergh's love affair. The wooden carvings in the passages have hung there since Frederick the Great's reign only the dining room has been altered, to the great sorrow of the artistle vis-itor. Once upon a time this was a vaulted chamber, a chapel of St. Leonard; now gone forever, and replaced by modern furniture, while black-coat-ed waiters, with their broken English.

Curlous Effects of the Thermometer in Winter and Summer.

"Now, just look at that thermometer!" he exclaimed, wiping his glasses and mopping his brow. "What's the matter with the thermometer, I should like to know?" queried his compan-ion. "I never look at a thermometer. If I'm hot I'm hot; and if I'm cold, I'm cold, and I don't care what the mercury thinks about it."

"That's all right; but don't you know the thing has a terrible fascination for me?"

"I really can't help it. But what I'd like to have somebody tell me, is why looking at the thermometer makes you colder in winter and warmer in

"Is it a fact?" "Certainly it is. Everybody knows that.

"I know that It appears to make people warmer in cummer-that's on the dead level. They get nervous and fret and fume, and that is heating to

"Then why shouldn't it warm a man up to see the mercury crawling down below zero. You may look at he thermometer on a cold winter's day and fret and fume all you want over the temperature, and it doesn't warm you up; on the contrary, you feel every additional degree, as if it were another layer of ice. Now, how do you account for that?"
"What did you say a moment ago that the mercury was?"

"Ninety-five degrees." "Only ninety-five? You've made me feel as though it were 105 with your confounded conundrums. Good day!" -New York Recorder.

Rising and falling with the waves that swept the bosom of the broad Atlantic, the stately ship bore majesticalty on its course, its mighty frame thrilling with the ceaseless pulsations the titanic machinery that throbbed within.
