

INAUGURATED.

PRESIDENT MCKINLEY

VICE-PRES. HOBART.

A VAST POPULACE GREETS THE NEW ADMINISTRATION.

WASHINGTON NEVER SAW SUCH A CROWD BEFORE.

THE PLAN OF ## PUBLIC POLICY.

The Inaugural Address Was a Dignified, Conservative and Plain Exposition of Republican Principles, With No Tinge of Criticism for Past Administrations, or for Bryan, or Free Silver.

Cleveland and McKinley Exchanged Calls and Then Dined Together—The Parade, the Ball and the Costumes Worn by the Canton Ladies—Mother McKinley a Conspicuous Figure at the Ceremonies.

Feller says, he says to me, "Don't you wish that you could be ridin' in a keerridge fine While the others stood in line? Where the flags is flyin' gay On inauguration day, Ez the idol of the crowd, Wouldn't you feel mighty proud?"

Then I says, says I ter him, "I ain't no use ter try ter trim Hittin' posts with foliage fine; He plays his part; I play mine. Now'd I feel a-makin' bows? How'd he look a-feeding cows? 'I would be painful fur ter see Me ez him or him ez me."

Washington, March 4.—With all the pomp and noise and commotion usually attending the inauguration of a president, Citizen McKinley was installed as chief executive of these United States to-day. Retiring President Cleveland did as much for the success of the occasion as he could, but his huge frame was racked with rheumatic pains which on Tuesday had kept him to his bed, and it was under the strain of great physical suffering that he performed his part.

The first thing President McKinley did when he awoke this morning was to look out of his window and see what kind of a day had dawned. Major McKinley arose early, and, following the example set him by James Madison and John Quincy Adams, he donned a suit of clothes made entirely of American wool and American manufacture. Both of his predecessors named wore American-made clothes, and a special mention of this is made in their biographies.

General Horace Porter, as marshal of the untrained host, seemed omnipresent, while Mark Hanna was quite as conspicuous among the statesmen and politicians.

In the meantime, the procession of those who had seats on the floor was being formed, and as each body of distinguished men entered the south door, they were announced by Doorkeeper Alonzo Stewart. The Diplomatic Corps were introduced first and took their seats. Then came the Supreme Court, followed by the Cabinet, the officers of the army and navy, the Governors of States, and last the members of the House of Representatives, followed by the members-elect of the next Congress. When they were all seated, the Vice-President-elect was escorted to the seat on the right of Vice-President Stevenson, but not on the dais with him, for he occupied the seat two or three seats lower, the one which is usually occupied by the Sergeant-at-Arms of the Senate. When he took his seat, President Cleveland and President-elect McKinley entered from the south door leading from the grand cor-

Many forms of civilization crush one upon the other here. The farmer from Levinville, Va., with his farm truck crowd upon the carriage of an Ambassador. The soldiers in full uniform are here, with a touch of old memories in their regalia, and chipper young officers are tacked on to some slouched-hat Governor as a staff.

Breakfast was served to the President-elect and Mrs. McKinley in their private dining room, and the occasion was made a joyous one by the presence of a number of the party which accompanies Major McKinley to Washington. Following the breakfast, the President-elect received a few of his friends.

Every one feels a sort of proprietorship in the things in and about Washington. The hand-shaking mania of the office seekers and politicians seems infectious and everybody wears a "kiss-the-baby" smile. Good nature flows unrestrictedly, and one comes to realize as he views the crowd that we are but children of a larger growth with a tendency to the enjoyment of any sort of a public function, ranging in scope from the county fair to the inauguration of a president. Tuesday morning Major McKinley, with his wife and mother and a large party of friends, arrived from Canton. In the evening the incoming President was entertained at dinner by Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland. Mrs. McKinley was unable to attend owing to the fatigue of her journey.

The carriages of the committee were drawn up on F street, at the ladies' entrance to the hotel, and the President-elect and the Senate Committee descended from their rooms on the third floor by the elevator and walked through the corridor to the carriages. The military escort lined up on F street, and, as the President-elect entered the carriage, accompanied by the two members of the Senate Committee, Senators Sherman and Mitchell (of Wisconsin), they saluted.

Wednesday morning Major McKinley completed his Cabinet by the appointment of Cornelius N. Bliss, of New York. The Cabinet as announced is as follows:

The President-elect and Senator Sherman occupied the back seat, with Senator Mitchell facing them. The carriage proceeded on F street to Fifteenth, and to Pennsylvania avenue, and thence to the White House, followed by the military escort. On entering the house Major McKinley

- Secretary of State—John Sherman, of Ohio.
- Secretary of the Treasury—Lyman J. Gage, of Illinois.
- Secretary of War—General Russell A. Alger, of Michigan.
- Secretary of the Navy—J. D. Long, of Massachusetts.
- Attorney General—Joseph McKenna, of California.
- Secretary of Agriculture—James Wilson, of Iowa.
- Postmaster General—James A. Gary, of Maryland.
- Secretary of the Interior—Cornelius N. Bliss, of New York.

was received by President Cleveland. After a few minutes of greeting President Cleveland and President-elect McKinley, accompanied by Senators Sherman and Mitchell, left the White House and entered the President's private carriage. This was drawn by four horses. The procession under the military escort and the President-elect's Guard-of-Honor then proceeded down the avenue to the Capitol.

At 11 o'clock Major McKinley and his Secretary made a formal call at the White House, which was returned by President Cleveland and Secretary Thurber within the hour. These calls are a new function introduced by ex-President Harrison. The afternoon was spent in political conferences, and in the evening a complimentary dinner was given the President elect by Col. John Hay. Mrs. McKinley was under the physician's care Wednesday, but recovered so far as to view the parade for a short time to day.

big white building on Capitol Hill was packed with the citizens from all over the United States who had gathered to see the oath administered. The crowds had an excellent opportunity to see both the President and President-elect, for after leaving their carriages they climbed the broad steps leading to the Senate entrance. Meanwhile the President and President-elect held a reception in the President's room. The scene in the Marble Room and in the rooms where the President and President-elect remain is always one of great interest as well as of brilliant display. The Diplomatic Corps, in their court costumes, assemble in the beautiful Marble Room to await their entrance to the Senate chamber.

Ceremonies in the Senate. No one is admitted to the Senate wing of the Capitol except those holding tickets, the galleries being divided off for different classes of invited guests. The diplomatic gallery is reserved for the families of the Diplomatic Corps, and the executive gallery is reserved for the families of the President, Vice-President, President-elect, and the Presidential party. The Senators' families and friends have their own gallery, and the public gallery is given over to the families and friends of the members of the House; if there are any seats remaining those who have general tickets may take them.

TAKING THE OATH.

In the meantime, the procession of those who had seats on the floor was being formed, and as each body of distinguished men entered the south door, they were announced by Doorkeeper Alonzo Stewart. The Diplomatic Corps were introduced first and took their seats. Then came the Supreme Court, followed by the Cabinet, the officers of the army and navy, the Governors of States, and last the members of the House of Representatives, followed by the members-elect of the next Congress. When they were all seated, the Vice-President-elect was escorted to the seat on the right of Vice-President Stevenson, but not on the dais with him, for he occupied the seat two or three seats lower, the one which is usually occupied by the Sergeant-at-Arms of the Senate. ridor, and were escorted by the Committee of Arrangements to the two large leather chairs in front of the Vice-President's desk.

Vice-President Hobart Takes the Oath. By the time all were seated the hour of noon had arrived, and Vice-President Stevenson rapped the Senate to order and administered the oath of office to Vice-President-elect Hobart. The retiring Vice-President then made his valedictory address, and after he had finished he rapped the body to order and declare the Senate adjourned sine die. Immediately Secretary of the Senate William R. Cox read the President's proclamation convening the Senate in Senate in executive session—called executive because only one branch of Congress is in session. When this was finished, Vice-President Hobart grasped the gavel and rapped the Senate to order and declared it in executive session. He then delivered his address to the Senate and when he had finished he declared the Senate ready for organization.

It was then that the new Senators were brought forward and took the oath of office. After they had all been sworn in the Senate took a recess, and the procession was formed and moved from the Senate chamber to the east portico of the Capitol, where the President-elect was sworn in and delivered his address. The procession through the long corridor of the House to the rotunda was a most imposing one. Headed by the Marshal of the District of Columbia and the Marshal of the Supreme Court, the Presidential party follows, and behind comes

Disordered Liver

AND INFLAMMATORY RHEUMATISM IN A YOUNG BOY.

Mr. and Mrs. Howse Despaired of Their Boy's Life—He was Compelled to Give up His Studies.

From the Leader, Cleveland, Ohio. Few boys withstand an illness of so serious a nature as that with which Fred L. Howse was a year ago afflicted. Fred is now fifteen years of age, and attends the public schools. His home is No. 39 Plymouth Place, Cleveland, Ohio, and he is now a picture of puerile health and vigor. In the fall of 1895, however, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Howse, the former, a well-known business man, whose office is in the Arcade, had almost despaired of saving his life. The lad had become afflicted with inflammatory rheumatism which affected his entire body, and accompanying that painful ailment were several other very serious disorders. When she was requested to describe her son's sickness and his recovery, Mrs. Howse said: "It was in September, 1895, that Fred who was up to that time in delicate health, was attacked by inflammatory rheumatism. It was a very acute case for he was confined to his bed, and was unable to move even his arms or legs without bringing on excruciating pain. "Aside from the rheumatism Fred's liver was in serious disorder, and he used to vomit frequently. He was also subject to fainting spells, and altogether he had a very serious sickness. "We knew, of course, that though the rheumatism was exceedingly painful, it was not necessarily dangerous; the fainting spells and vomiting however alarmed us. Often when he had fainted he would lay like one dead. His face would become ashen pale and it was difficult at such times to detect his heart beats. These spells caused Mr. Howse and myself much uneasiness about our boy's condition. We called in a doctor and he prescribed for Fred, but the lad did not seem to improve, so I purchased a box of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People in one of the downtown stores. Then for four months steadily Fred took them instead of the medicine prescribed by the doctor and at the end of that period—it was about New Year's then—Fred was sufficiently improved to be able to go out. "The improvement was slow at first, but it was sure. I had unbounded faith in the pills as is evidenced by our continued use of them. It was necessary for us to take Fred out of school on account of his illness, but now he has returned and can join in all the sports with his schoolmates, and his health is as good as we could wish. He has never been ill since, and it is pretty safe to predict that he will not be sick again for some time. "Yes, I have recommended Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to my friends," said Mrs. Howse in reply to a question, "and many of them have used them since. I first read of the pills in the newspapers. "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People contain all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They may be had of all druggists or direct by mail from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Salem, N. Y., at 50c. per box, or six boxes for $2.50.

ECHOPHONE. THE LATEST TALKING MACHINE.

When Edison invented the phonograph, which reproduces the human voice, it was considered the greatest invention of the age—and so it was. Just think a moment:—Human voices, bands of music, songs of all kinds, speeches and lectures by great statesmen reproduced by these machines.

Why are not phonographs in every household? They cost too much—$40 to $200.

We have solved the problem. An Echophone will be shipped you (express charges to be paid by the purchaser), and "Leslie's Weekly" every week for one year, for the remarkably low price of $8.00.

The Echophone is run by clock-work. Any child can operate it. One record goes with each machine; extra records 50 cents each. The phonograph and graphophone cylinders can be used in this machine. If the talking machine is not perfectly satisfactory, we will refund you your money.

"Leslie's Weekly" is considered the best and most popular illustrated weekly in America. Its subscription price is $4.00 per year, and the Echophone $10.00. Now you wonder how we can sell both for $8.00. We will tell you. We want 250,000 subscribers to "Leslie's Weekly." We believe that we will get them this way. Those who advertise with us when we publish that number of papers will pay for our loss now. Therefore, the number of machines will be limited—"First come, first served."

Weyler Returns to Havana. No Cheers Greet the Captain General—His Campaign a Failure.

Captain General Weyler returned to Havana on March 4. The scene was vastly different from that which characterized his return from the "pacification" of the province of Pinar del Rio. Instead of riding through crowds of cheering admirers he walked from the waterside to the palace where he soon retired to his apartments, without having received any popular welcome. This was due, perhaps, to his unexpected arrival, which did not allow of any official preparations being made to welcome him. No reason is given for General Weyler's return to Havana. It is generally well known that his campaign in Matanzas and Santa Clara has been an ignominious failure and while he was claiming to have compelled the insurgents to retreat eastward to Puerto Principe they had, in fact, dodged past his columns and pursued their way westward. It is thought that the change in administration in Washington may have much, if not all, to do with his return, as he has been led to believe that President McKinley will not sanction the illegal arrest and detention of American citizens.

The Shakers have made a discovery which is destined to accomplish much good. Realizing that three-fourths of all our sufferings arise from stomach troubles, that the country is literally filled with people who cannot eat and digest food, without subsequently suffering pain and distress, and that many are starving, wasting to mere skeletons, because their food does them no good, they have devoted much study and thought to the subject, and the result is this discovery of their Digestive Cordial.

A little book can be obtained from your druggist that will point out the way of relief at once. An investigation will cost nothing and will result in much good.

Children all hate to take Castor Oil, but not Laxol, which is palatable.

Dynamiters at Work. Attempt to Blow a Mount Carmel Family Into Eternity. A nearly successful attempt was made Thursday night at Mount Carmel to blow Andrew Serkin and his family into eternity by exploding dynamite beneath his house. Some persons, at present unknown, exploded the charge of dynamite underneath Serkin's house, directly under his sleeping rooms. One end of the house was blown into splinters and Serkin and his family were hurled from their beds by the shock, but, beyond a few bruises received by two of his children in their fall from bed, the family escaped uninjured. Four men were seen running away from the house after the explosion and were chased, but escaped. Serkin knows of no enemies that he has or any reason for the attempt upon the lives of himself and family.
