A POISON PACTORY. A Terrible Place Where Deadly Drugs are

Innufactored

In London is a strange establishment behind a wilderness of warehouses and tumbledown tenements, in a remote suburb. Its massive gates are locked and jealously guarded. A visitor must not only be careful where he steps and refrain from touching, he must also breathe with great caution. One of the terrible poisons manufactured here is pure anhydrous acid, a drug seldom seen outside a chemical inhoratory. This is the deadliest of all known poisons. The discoverer was stricken dead from inhaling its fumes. From 3 to 5 per cent of this -hemical added to 95 or 97 parts water makes prussic acid. This diluted polson causes instant death, even when taken a minute quantities.

Next to anhydrous acid, the worst poison they make is cyanide of potasshum. Last year they turned out over 1,000 tons of it. Five grains being a fatal dose, the annual output would be sufficient to kill 2,500,000 people. In the work room, where men are gathared around a witch's caldron containing over a hundred weight of molten yanide, a strange picture is presented. The seething mass of white-hot liquid poison, with the lambent play of the furnace fires, the phantom faces of the workmen enveloped in an uncannylooking mask, peering into the heart of the dreadful mixture through the thick atmosphere, are a terrible sight. In another room, where are tons of the inished product, looking like crystalized sugar, "good enough to eat," one man is never allowed alone. For some inexplicable reason it exercises a strange fascination for the men who inhale its fumes. They are haunted by a desire to eat it. But, knowing that satisfying the craving means instant death, most, but not all, are able to resist it. Aside from this fascination its manufacture is not considered unhealthy. The same cannot be said of corrosive sublimate. Its fumes are deadly .-- Chicago Inter-Ocean.

MONEY IN WASPS.

The Way They Built Their Homes of Benefit to a North Carolina Farmer.

Along the banks of the Cape Fear river, in North Carolina, are lowlands, behind which lies a higher level, or bench. The lowlands are subject to more or less frequent overflows by freshets, which are destructive to crops planted therein. A number of years ago a farmer, resident in the vicinity, made a very comfortable sum of money by insuring his neighbors' crops against these freshets. His unvarying success as an insurer was for many years a profound mystery to the people of the region. The years when he declined to insure were invariably years of destructive overflow. The years when he was willing to insure were equally certain to be seasons of exemption from disaster.

Observation had shown him that a certain species of wasp, which built its home in the ground, built some years on the lowlands, and other years upon the higher level. Experience taught him that when the wasps built on the lowlands there were no freshets, and when they built on the higher ground, the lower would, some time during the

Ellis Island, the Government Immigrant Land? ing. is Said to be Haunted by the Ghosts of Former Criminals of the Sea Who Were Hanged There.

Ellis island is haunted. There is no to unravel the mystery. They lay in doubt about it, for the watchmen who wait near the well until midnight. guard Uncle Sam's immigrant station At that hour they were almost petrion the historic little island say they fied when they saw the forms of two have seen sights given to few mortals men clad in the costumes pirates afto see, and have heard moans and fect hanging by the neck from the cries and shouts which never came pirate's tree. When they recovered from lips of man. More than this, one man there knows what it is to incur the displeasure of the disembodied. He was prowling around the ghost well at the forbidden hour when a heavy spade wielded by ghostly arms descended on his head and knocked him senseless. A great bruise on the back of his head is still there to confound the incredulous.

At midnight shadowy forms, clad in walk abroad, and, arm in arm, make the circuit of the island. The ghosts are said to be those of the pirates hanged years ago on the "pirates' tree" in the shadow of the ancient governor's house. This house is still standing. It has defied the ravages of time, and its oaken beams and white ash shingles are as sound as they were the day they were taken to the island by the villagers of "Neu Yorke," who turned out in force to erect the build-

Southeast of the old house stands the "pirates' tree." In summer its of the house, and in winter the branches of one gaunt limb-the very one upon which the pirates were hanged-beats a mournful tattoo against the low eaves as if sounding the "long roll" tor the souls of the departed buccan cers.

A few feet from the tree is an artesian well. It was sunk at the expense of the government, but no water was found, and after boring nearly a thousand feet the project and well were abandoned. Nothing but a deep, black hole, four feet in diameter and eighty feet deep, now remains to mark the spot. Four men lost their lives in that well by being caught in quicksand, and their bodies were never recovered. The branches of the pirates' at that time it is said the branches of the tree are mightily agutated and blow upward, as if a great draft issued from the depth of the big hole.

Despite the most searching investigation the residents on the Island cannot account for the strange sounds and sights in any other way than that ghosts are abroad. A feeling of terror ployees who are forced to remain times when the spirits become unusually festive, doors known to have been securely locked were violently slammed, and windows known to have been tastened were raised and lower-

Sprague away Treasurer Manning saw something uncanny and yelled, "Ghosts." There was a stampede and poor Sprague was left straggling behind, He hid himself in a trunk and remained there until morning. HISTORY OF THE ISLAND.

The very next night Watchman Jahn and two of his assistants set out from their fright the brave watchmen scurried for their quarters as fast as their legs could carry them, and have not ventured out at night since.

One hundred years ago Ellis island was known as Oyster island. Shortly after the war of 1812 Captain Morgan, an old sea dog, turned pirate and committed many outrages in the bay and on the coast. He was captured after a fierce struggle, and, with four John F. Adams and running along Eight long capes and three cornered hats, of his piratical crew, was hanged to the pirate's tree.

Nearly forty years later the notor- dredth degrees east, one hundred and ious buccaneer, Captain Gibbs, whose deeds of lawlessness stirred up the entire community, was hanged on the same tree, in the presence of 1,000 people.-New York Advertiser.

Not a Single Voter.

We know of but one county in the United States that hasn't a voter with. in its boundaries. Dewey county, S. Dak., which has an area of 2200 square miles (it is larger than the whole state of Delaware), was returned by the last Federal census as having no population, and, though officially organized as a county, no votes were cast in it in the Presidential election of 1896-there was no one to vote. Delano county, in South Dakota, has an area of 1045 square miles, yet was returned by the last census as tree extend over the mouth of the well, yet was returned by the last census as and the ghosts of the pirates make it having a population of only forty pertheir headquarters at midnight, and sons, and it contained at the last Presidential election five voters, four of whom cast their ballots for McKinley and Hobart and one for Bryan and Sewall.

The Queen of Greece.

It is said by a lady who recently visted Greece and had the henor of meeting the royal family, that perfect harmony existed between them, and the King and Queen are devoted to their shildren. The Queen is still a very beautiful woman, and the only lady Admiral in the world. She holds this cank in the Russian army, an henorary appointment e. ferred on her by the inte Tsar, because h father held the cank of High Admiral, and for the rea-son that she is a very capable yachtswoman. The King has a very remarkthe memory, an interesting personality, and is a brilliant conversationalist. He goes about the streets of Athens without any attendants, and talks with any friend he chances to meet. Prince George is very attractive. and his feats of strength, shown often in the cause of chivairy, are a continuous subject of conversation among the people.-New York Sun.

Lights have been mysteriously extinguished, and mighty gusts of wind have come down the chimneys. This latter strange proceedings is said to be due to the fact that the more venturesome ghosts take special delight in rushing down the chimneys. After the ferryboat J. H. Brinckerhoff makes its last trip the island becomes a lonely spot indeed. Business ceases, and as the setting sun's rays become dimmer and dimmer and the shades of night envelop the little isle, a feeling of desolation pervades the place.

GHOSTLY BUCCANEERS.

Those on the island say that just before midnight the wraiths begin to appear, and they are out in full force when the clock in Trinity tower begins to toll 12. Sepulchral tones are heard issuing from the direction of the well. Suddenly a dozen shadowy forms dressed in long capes, high top boots and three cornered hats leap up from the darkness of the well and dance frantically about the edge. Then the branches of the "pirates' tree" shake violently, the tree rocks from side to side and groaning is heard.

The spirits of two buccaneers are seen bent over the ground beneath the tree going through the motions of digging. At times the hanging of the pirates is rehearsed. Two of their number are dragged forth from the shadows of the old gunner's house and hanged from the fatal branch. 'When the moon shines brightly the ghosts seldom venture from the black pit. On Wednesday night Watchman Sprague was missed and it was thought he had fallen into the ghosts' well.

The watchmen and Treasurer Manning armed themselves and salled forth to find the belated watchman They came across him lying near the doctor's quarters, partially stunned. When he recovered he said he heard noises that froze his blood, and before he could run he was felled by a spade,
