The Hazleton Tragedy.

Collision between bodies of the people, whether citizens or aliens, and the civil authorities must ever be anomalous under a tree government; and the conflict at Hazleton is not simply anomalous, it is deplorable in whatever aspect it may be viewed, and most of all in the loss of life which has resulted therefrom. The situation is one which never should have arisen in a government of the people by the people. Having arisen, its larger lessons are for the moralists and the teachers of society; its immediate and practical duties are for the authorities, and they are too plain to admit of discussion.

The first duty of the State is to restore and maintain order. This will not be a difficult matter to do. The Governor has been commendably prompt, and his action in calling on the military power has doubtless been tha means of saving many lives. WEYLER'S RAVAGE IN CUBA-

General Weyler has at last announced his war policy. What it has been has been seen time and time again, but not until now has it come Another change was made in Gov-from his own lips. He told it at the ernor Hastings' cabinet on Frlday palace to the high officers, who received him when he returned from the field, and here is how he told it:

"I am not afraid," said General Weyler, "of the charges made against my administration. I do not try, either, to win the title of a humane couched in the same language as that general. War is war, and I came here to make war, a relentless, pitiless war against the enemies of Spain.

"I never understood the wisdom of governing with a slack hand a rebel people, and so well known was my letter to General McCormick asking opinion in this matter that as soon as my coming to Cuba as Captain General was announced all the covert General gave the Deputy's part in the enemies of Spain who lived here among us emigrated in haste to the United States. That frank exposure of his feelings meets with the enthusiasm of the uncompromising Spanish press. A stanch Conservative journalist writes:

"General Weyler is compared in the United States with the Duke of Alva, and that is but an acknowledgment of his merits. The Duke of Alva was a great general. He made war with fire and sword in the Netherlands, but he did not lose the Netherlands for Spain. It was the Duke of Parma who lost them after him with a milder policy.'

> When the farmers take the trouble to consider the causes of the present demand for their corn and wheat and the enhancement of prices, they can only reach one conclusion. Two words tell the story: Short crops. The nations now buying our surplus are compelled to trade with us because of their own necessities, not because of any favoring disposition. At the same time that they are buying shiploads of our breadstuffs we are making commercial war against them by discouraging the exchange of commodities, except after the infliction of heavy penalties. We are only restrained from a still more offensive policy by treaty stipulations. The farmers will understand that the tariff policy of this country tends steadily to discourage the growth of our export trade and to thus cut them off from their markets. They owe much this year to the perversity of Nature, but nothing to the obstructive perversity of politicians.- Ex.

A Furlough to Get Married.

The Thirteenth Regiment men, who have the most undesirable quarters, those at Lattimer, varied the monotony of inactive life in the field on Tuesday by a pleasant little incident.

Private Gibbs, of Company A, from Scranton, had made a request for a furlough. His commander was averse to granting leave, except for good cause.

The "soldier boy" blushed a little, and said he had an engagement to get married the next day. The furlough was granted,
company, headed by a fife and drum corps, escorted him to the cars and showered rice upon him. They carried crude banners, reading: "We're Going Home to be Marreading: "We're Going Home to be Mar-ried," with other faceous legends; sounded the .eveil'e and playe.i "The Girl I Left Be-hind Me."

Even this little affair served to show how completely overawed the strikers are by the presence of the troops. The sound of the droms gathered a crowd of them within a few moments, and they watched the funmiling with incomprehensible and frightened eyes.

A night or two ago, when taps were sounded in the Lattimer camp at 9 o'clock, the call so scared the foreigners that there was a stampede for the surrounding woods in the fear that an attack was to be made.
