to get into the centre or heart of the plant, otherwise it may be spolled. When this work has to be done by one man, it is a convenient way to first tie he stalks up together, not too tightly, or it may rot, but just close enough without pressure to prevent the entrance of any soil to the heart. In large gardens where several men are kept, the most expeditious way is to have three men do the work, one man on each side of the row or rows to dig up the soil and place it in position igainst the plants, while the third man straddles the row, and in each band gathers together the stalks and holds them up till the other men put the soil in position. As the work progresses the soil is to be somewhat compacted with the hands. Three good handy men will do this work very juickly after a little practice. badly from the iron in many soils com-ing in contact with the tender stalks, the best and most satisfactory way is to use boards, a foot or so in width, placed on edge on each side of the rows, about six inches apart, according to the size of plants. There is much difference of opinion among growers as to the best method of blanching celery to best secure that peuilar nutty flavor tound in wellblanched celery, many claiming the necessity of earthing up, but we find that celery can be blanched just as well and be just as tender by the use of boards as by the earthing up process; but if boards are used, a longer lime should be given to blanch. This method has the advantage of clean, rustless, and wormless stalks. For summer use the self-blanching va-rieties only should be used.

Prosperity Coming.

The crops this year are not larger than they have been for some years. The four largest crops of corn ever raised in the United States yielded $300,000,000 less than the four smallest trops. Not only is this anomaly true of corn, but also of potatoes and to some extent, of wheat.

The foreign demand for wheat is excellent. European countries will not give the yield that was expected, and the deficiency will be filled by American wheat, which now is twenty cents higher this year than last.

The price of potatoes is double what it was last year. Corn has advanced three cents over last year, and cattle fifty cents per 100. Wool is a third higher and sheep has advanced a fourth in value. There has been little change in the price of oats or dairy products.

The increases in price will result in putting money into the hands of farmers. This will be used to pay creditors, who will liquidate indebtedness. Thus prosperity will illuminate the whole country within a short time .--Assistant Secretary of Agriculture J. H. Brigham in an interview.
