We take the following from the State notes of the Philadelphia Record. There must be a mistake somewhere as the person named never resided or made her home here.

"Miss Mercy Gottshall, a public school teacher of Bloomsburg, disappeared Tuesday from her aunt's home, at No. 3726 Kedzie avenue, Chicago, where she has lately resided.

A French geographer is trying to induce the Royal Geographical Society to construct a revolving globe on the scale of eight miles to the inch, which would make it possible to represent every marked elevation or depression on the earth's surface. The diameter of such a globe would be eighty-four feet. This project is a modification of the plan proposed for the Paris Exhibition in 1900, for the execution of which sufficient money could not be raised in France.

STATE NEWS.

—Easton's City Councils have elected a garbage officer with a salary of $50 per month.

—Leaning heavily on the railing of a second story balcony, Mrs. Elizabeth Connell, of Scranton, was pitched on the pavement below by the breaking of the woodwork and instantly killed.

—By the will of the late Colonel Charles A. Wikoff, of Easton, killed at Santiago, his entire estate goes to the widow.

—Eight-year-old Myrtle Boyd of Luzerne County while playing with fire her clothes caught on fire and she was burned to death.

—The borough authorities of Hollidaysburg and the Salvation Army, are scrapping in the lower courts over the right of the latter to make great noises on the streets and in their barracks. Several Salvationists have been sent to jail for brief periods, but the noises still go on.

—Joseph Kline formerly of Mahanoy City, is with the Rough Riders of Santiago. He received special mention for bravery in the La Quasina battle. Kline was in the front, received a wound and was being taken to the rear, when a sharp shooting Spaniard in a tree was picking off men and Kline snatched a rifle from one of the men nearby and brought the Spaniard down at the first shot, dead.

Lippincott's Magazine for August, 1898.

The complete novel in the August issue of Lippincott's, "The Last Rebel," is by Joseph A. Altscheler, now well-known as a writer of war stories. The scene is a lonesome post in the southern Alleghenies, held for the Confederacy by a chivalrous monomaniac after the unpleasantness of 1861-65 had ended. The action deals with the experiences of a northerner who unwisely wandered into those parts and found himself a prisoner.

Tudie and "Misery," as described respectively by Alice Miriam Roundy and Elizabeth F. Tittle, were girls of extremely diverse situation and fortune; one of them lived in Colorado, the other in a wild part of Pennsylvania. Edwin A. Pratt and John Ford Barbour narrate, in the characters of hero and heroine, the amatory exploit of "A Fortune-hunter."

The prospects of "The United States as a Colonial Power" are considered by Fred Perry Powers. He thinks that this is our manifest destiny, and that by reforming our politics and putting only fit men in office we can discharge our new duties creditably. George J. Varney writes of "Signalling in War-time," and George Ethelbert Walsh of "Privates."

Two articles appropriate to the season are "Death in the Woods and Fields," by Calvin Dill Wilson, and "Summer Logging" by Allan Hendricks; each is the outcome of personal observation and knowledge.

A bit of old frontier history is given by Elizabeth Wormeley Latimer under the title "In Ohio a Hundred Years Ago." It epitomizes the adventures of Charles Johnston, for some time prisoner among Indians, as recorded by him in 1827.

Vance Thompson furnishes some leaves out of his book as "The Police Reporter" of sundry newspapers. Annie Steger Winston writes pleasantly of "The Democracy of Fiction," and considers Scott the most truly democratic of novelists.

The poetry of the number is by Celia A. Hayward, Julia Schayer, Helen Gray Cone, Carrie Blake Morgan, Grace Shoup, and Grace F. Pennypacker.

Another large flag was flung to the breeze in the presence of several hundred people at the corner of Leonard and Third Streets on Friday evening. Several selections suitable to the occasions were rendered by the Band. The speakers were H. A. McKillip, Fred Ickler and William Chrisman, Esqs. The flag is 18x24, and was procured by subscriptions through the efforts of C. M. Hess.

McClure's Magazine for August.

Short stories by Rudyard Kipling; Rowland E. Robinson, William Allen White, Cutcliffe Hynes, and several others, make McClure's Magazine for August especially a fiction number. In Mr. Kipling's story we have a new and most diverting chapter in the lives of those most ingenious and audacious English school boys—Stalky, Beetle, and M. Turk. In Mr. White's we have an account of the first real passion of our old friend, the King of Boyville, Winfield Hancock Pennington—famously known as "Piggy." The other stories are no less characteristic of their authors; and all are interesting, cheerful, and wholesome, affording a diversion that is both nutritious and palatable. The fiction, however, is by no means all that is noteworthy in the number. It contains a religious poem by Mr. Gladstone; an account by Colonel Andrew S. Rowan of a peculiarly hazardous secret journey made by him across Cuba, after the war began, in order to carry messages from our government to the insurgents; the conclusion of Charles A. Dana's reminiscences, giving new information regarding the fall of Richmond, the assassination of Lincoln, the arrest of Jefferson Davis, and other events at the close of the war; and an account by Major-General Miles of his observations and experiences as a guest of honor, last year, at special royal reviews and manoeuvres in Russia, Germany, and France. The illustrations of the number are remarkably fine; and so is the special cover designed by Kenyon Cox.

HOW are the children this summer? Are they doing well? Do they get all the benefit they should from their food? Are their cheeks and lips of good color? And are they hearty and robust in every way?

If not, then give them

of cod liver oil with hypophosphites.

It never fails to build up delicate boys and girls. It gives them more flesh and better blood.

It is just so with the baby also. A little Scott's Emulsion, three or four times a day, will make the thin baby plump and prosperous. It furnishes the young body with just the material necessary for growing bones and nerves.
