Mahlon Dieterich Loses His Life by Falling From the Hay Mow of Hartzell's Barn.

The almost lifeless body of Mahlon Dieterick was found on Friday morning of last week lying at the bottom of the ladder leading to the hav mow in the City Hotel barn. A physician was hastily summoned but he was beyond medical aid, and died in a few minutes thereafter.

He had gone to the barn to sleep, and it is supposed he fell through to the floor while in a bewildered condition.

He was aged about thirty-five years and worked at the butchering business. He has been living in town for upwards of eight years, but so far as known he had no relatives here, but has a sister residing at Norristown.

Squire Jacoby was notified, but on learning the facts, decided that an inquest was not necessary.

The remains were taken to Ham

He was born in Berwick on May 30, 1852, and is, therefore, 46 years of age—just in the prime of life. He graduated at the Normal School, in 'he class of 1871, and then spent a year at the 1871, and then spent a year at the sessed of a well balanced temperature.

That's the sincerity there is in this talk about a "non-partisan" judiciary.

Judge Herring-

During the term of court just end-ed Judge Grant Herring performed the duties of his office with marked ability. He dispatched busiress rap-idly, and his charges were brief but comprehensive and to the point. He will preside at next December term, and on the first Monday in January will return to the bar, where he is one of the acknowledged leaders in the Dickinson 6, Normal O.

While the Normal foot ball eleven were torced to yield to the superior work of Dickinson College Saturday afternoon last, by a score of 6 to 0, yet it must be admitted that they played good ball. The visitors scored the only touchdown of the game, after sixonly touchdown of the game, after six-teen minutes of play in the first half. In the last half the Normal goal was never in danger, the pigskin being kept in about the middle of the field. The result was a great disappointment to the Dickinson coach who accompanied the team here. He had expected, and counted on score being at least 20 to o, but he admitted before the game was over that his team had no cinch. For the Normal the work of Smethers and Burns is deserving of special mention, while Hockenburg and Houston distinguished themselves for the visitors. The line up:
