A DUBIOUS COMPLIMENT.

But the Man Possessed the President's Endorsement on His Note.

"I'll tell you a story about President Cleveland that you probably never heard," said a prominent Detroiter the other hay, "One of those rascally loafers in Washington who sometimes find their way into office, rented the house of an aged widow who was dependent on that source for her entire to month and finally laughed in wouldn't pay, and that she couldn't make him pay. He would not go out till the law put him out, and he would avail himself of all the delays possible. She consulted a lawyer who had been a friend of her family for years, but the loaferish officeholder was even more impudent to heard the facts and then said in an indignant tone: 'Get the fellow's note.'

"But his note isn't worth the paper it is written on.' 'No matter. Get his note and bring it to me." "There was no trouble in carrying out this request, the debtor expressing his delight at being allowed to settle at the trouble of writing a worthless obligation. "The lawyer took it to the president and said: 'Now what?'

"This,' replied the president, as he wrote his name across the back. 'I indorse it; now demand payment.'

"The officeholder was in a leading hotel when the lawyer walked up to him and asked a settlement as he handed him the note. The fellow sneered until he turned the paper over, out a request that the lawyer wal there for ten minutes and inside of that time he was back with the money. From then on he was smart enough to pay as he went, and new plumes himself on the fact that the president of the United States once indersed his personal note."-Detroit Free Press.

HER DETERMINATION WON.

Miss Dix Gained the Interest of the Chair. man for Insane Asylums.

In her early attempts to right the wrongs of the insane, Dorothy Dix met only discouragement and coldness, or indifference, which is worse; but she did not cease to labor, and if she lost heart no one but herself knew it. She asked for an interview with the chairman of the most important House Committee in the Carolina Legislature. He declined the interview under the pretext of pressure of business.

"Very well," wrote Miss Dix, "I must see you. You will call on me or I shall call on you."

The chairman then went to see Miss Dix. He entered the room, hat in hand, a bundle of papers under his arm, and declined the proffered chair. "I have called," he said. "I am in haste. Will you make your business known as quick as possible?"

The lady began to speak. Eloquently she pleaded the cause of the insane. She spoke from a full heart and a well stored mind. Her listener became interested; he forgot that he was in a hurry, sat down, piled his papers on the floor and heard with rapt attention. The interview lasted three hours, and the chairman was won over to the cause, and he was after a strong ally of Miss Dix in her noble work. Thirty-three lunatic asylums in this country owe their beginning to Miss Dix .- Youth's Com-

A Land Without Women.

There is only one territory of any size-and never has been but oneoccupied by any considerable population from which woman is absolutely excluded. Yet such a place exists to-day and has existed for centuries. As far back as history reaches, to all females it has been forbidden ground. This country without women is situated on a bold plateau, between the old peninsula of Acte, in the Greeian archipelago, and the mainland. Here in the midst of cultivated fields and extensive woodlands dwells a monastic confederation of Greek Christians. with twenty-three convents, and numbering more than 7,000 souls. Not one of the monasteries dates from a later time than the twelfth century. A few soldlers guard the borders of the main land, and no woman is ailowed to cross the frontier. Nor is this all, the rule is extended to every female creature, and from time immemorial no cow, mare, hen, duck or goose has been permitted to enter this territory.-Chicago Record.

RUDYARD KIPLING'S NEW POEM.

"The White Man's Burden."

Rudyard Kipling has written a poem en-titled "The White Man's Burden," evidently called forth by the colonial development of the United States It will appear in the February issue of "McClure's Magazine, although the editors did not receive the poem until after the Magazine was on the press. The frontispiece was taken out, and the poem was printed in its place. The poem is not only important, but is of considerable length, and we are permitted to give some

Take up the White Man's burden— send forth the best ye breed— Go, bind your sons to exile To serve your captives' need; To wait, in heavy harness, On fluttered folk and wild— Your new-caught sullen peoples, Half devil and half calld.

Take up the Wnite Man's burden-The savage wars of peace— Fill full the mouth of Famine, And bid the sickness cease;

The ports ye shall not enter.
The roads ye shall not tread.
Go, make them with your living
And mark them with your dead

By all ye will or whisper,

By all ye leave or do, The slient, sollen peoples Shall weigh your God and you. Kipling's short stories in "McClure's have turned out to be the most successful fiction series that the publishers sign of age now. Many must wear have ever secured. The January number is out of print, with nearly 15,000 unsupplied subscribers. The February edition of "Mc Clure's Magazive" is 70,000 copies larger than that of February of a year ago.
