"Blues" the Common Fate of All All Great Teachers of the Generation Had Their Periods of Depression.

"If we call the roll of the great teachers of this generation we discern that not one but has had his hours of depression when his reform has seemed failure, and, weary of strife, he has asked God to take away his life," writes Rev. Newell Dwight Hillis, D. D., of "An Outloook upon the Victory of Optimism," in the October Ladies' Home Journal. "Carlyle enters into gloom saying. I shall die leaving no man the better for the liv-Spencer, too, in the sadest ing." pieces of writing our generation has seen, affirmed that he had failed to influence his generation, since a philosopher has done little for a man who simply shows him what is right; while Ruskin, like Elijah, bitterly and passionately prays for the end of his career. But in retrospect we now see that in his depressed hour the prophet stood in a golden haze of glory that veiled the future fame and victory. So far from forgetting Turner, England has consecrated the noblest room in her gallery to that man who was the great master of orchestral effects in color. If the sense of failure once choked Ruskins heart, now we see all economic teachers are writing their philosophy under the influence of his Christian spirit. ## Don't Rock the Baby.

Strange as it may seem, the timehonored custom of rocking babies to sleep is a bad one. It is injurious to the children themselves, and is a cause, eventually, of much unnecessary trouble to their guardians. Mothers should, therefore, see to it that from the very first that the little ones are brought up in the way they should go, and that the monthly nurse does not get them into bad habits by rocking them to sleep, either in her arms or in their cots. There is no doubt that rocking is the most expeditious way of inducing a baby to go to sleep; but if one once starts, a baby will not sleep without it, and at a later age is likely to suffer from insomnia. Rocking may save immedi ate trouble to a lazy nurse or mother by inducing sleep when a child does not require it, or when it ought to be taken up from its cot and have clean clothes put on, but it will never cause that sweet, gentle and perfect sleep which should be characteristic of a baby who has no artificial aids to induce slumber.
