

NOBLE DEED OF A NEWSBOY.

Takes the Pudding from His Crutch to Relieve the Distress of a Horse.

A small act of kindness sometimes thrills the heart of the beholder, especially if the act is performed without thought of observation and quite without the hope that it will be known and applauded.

In front of the Masonic temple, in Minneapolis, in which building the physician has his office, a little cripple is accustomed to sell newspapers. He is a sufferer from infantile paralysis of a cerebral type, and also has a hairlip. He seems at a sad disadvantage in this eager and bustling world.

The other day a horse attached to an ash-cart was standing on the street, opposite where the crippled boy stood on his crutch selling papers. Somehow, the boy discovered that the horse had a galled shoulder.

As the doctor watched him from his window, the boy cast about for something with which to relieve the poor horse. Finding nothing else, he ripped off from the top of his crutch the cloth stuffed with felt which eased the crutch to his own armpit, and tied it with two strings to the horse's collar, so that it would cover the place where the collar bore upon the raw shoulder.

"I had just time," the doctor says, "to see him finish the work and hobble away on his depleted crutch with a haste that made me think he feared the owner might catch him at it."

A MAINE BEAR STORY.

The Pelt of the Mother Bear Used as a Ring Attracts One of Her Cubs into Captivity.

An old she bear had been killing sheep and searing the women and children in a Maine township, and a farmer, who was a dead shot, took an afternoon off to hunt the animal. While passing through a blackberry patch, he found a fat cub, and after a short chase, caught it in his arms.

EARNINGS OF PLAYWRIGHTS.

More Than One Native Drama Has Coined Its Author Over $100,000.

Dramatists of established reputation write plays only upon order. Their ordinary prepayments are $500 upon the delivery of a scenario and $500 more upon the completion of a play.

What Would You Give to be cured of catarrh?

If you or your friends have this disease, you know how disagreeable it is. Its symptoms are inflamed eyes, throbbing temples, ringing noises in the ears, headaches, capricious appetite, and constant discharge of mucus. Fortunately its cure is not a question of what you will give, but what you will take.

There is a cherry tree in Clinton, Iowa, according to a local paper, which is loaded with fruit and blossoms. A few weeks ago it began to bloom, and in a short time there were cherries on the tree, which turned red, and would have been ripe in a few days had not the recent cold weather killed them.
