ORANGEVILLE.

decree to organize the borough, and at an election held February 20, the following persons were chosen to fill the several offices: Burgess, A. B. Herring; Justice of the Peace, H. J. Conner and James B. Harman; Councilmen, C. J. Megargell, 1 yr., J. B. Montgomery, 1 yr., C. B. White, 2 yrs., J. B. Delong, 2 yrs., Geo. S. Fleckenstine, 3 yrs., Ranslow Fister, 3 yrs., J. W. Conner, 3 yrs.; School Directors, Dr. G. L. Jolly and L. C. Williams, 1 year; H. B. Low, Geo. M. D. Herring, 2 years; E. H. Sloan, Levi Fry, 3 years.

High Constable, Amos Neyhard; Constable, D. T. Keller; Registry Assessor, E. W. Coleman; Tax Collector, O. P. Delong; Auditors, J. W. Hilday, Geo. G. Jones, A. M. Dewitt.

Poor Overseers, I. K. Dildine, A. W. Eveland; Judge of Election, D. P. Unger; Inspectors, Robert Bardo, Harrison Brewer.

The place for holding the township election was changed to Bowman's Mills.

The borough contains about 500 inhabitants, and about 100 residences. A number of well-considered ordinances have been passed by the council, and when the machinery is put in complete running order, Orangeville will no doubt be a model municipal corporation. C. B. White is President of the Borough Council, and Clinton Herring, Secretary.

(From our Correspondent.)

Orangevillites are lately pricking up their ears. The word is being passed along the line that a great discovery has been made of valuable mineral. This will make some of the inhabitants carry their chins higher than formerly. It is to be hoped that their highest anticipations may be realized. As I happen to be on the wrong side of the creek, I do not expect to derive any direct benefit from their newly found treasure. But I am always ready to rejoice with those who do rejoice, etc.

Orangeville be it known has lately become an incorporated town, a fact that should rebound to their benefit. Mining districts frequently bring together some of the rougher class of society. As a borough they will be better prepared to deal with that element. As I am no prophet I shall not attempt to predict what may be the result of their newly acquired dignity as a borough or of their mineral wealth. Either of these or both together may result in producing in some of them what is called the big head. I do not know exactly what that is, as I have never been troubled with it, but from the manner in which I hear it spoken of, I presume it is something we do well to avoid. A little history of the town dating back half a century or more may be interesting to some of the younger generation.

The town has not grown very rapidly in wealth or population, but there has been a decided improvement in what tends to good morals. There is still room for improvement. Whether its mineral wealth or corporate power will make things better or worse remains to be seen.

I first passed through the above named village about fifty-three years ago. It then contained four hotels and two churches. The hotels have been diminished by one, the churches have been increased by a like number. Herein consists the improvement in what tends to good morals. The number of increase or decrease does not fairly represent the case. They have more preaching in either church, the preacher is better paid, and money is contributed for missionary work in other less favored districts. At the time of which I write there was a distillery in full blast, which furnished whiskey for home consumption and helped supply other places with the stuff.

There have been other changes in the village. The inhabitants are not the same. There is but one man now living in the village who was a man living there at the time above mentioned. William Fisher is the oldest of the original inhabitants, perhaps the oldest man in the town, but he is not the largest.

Rickets, Stewart, Covanhovan, Lazarus and some others who were amongst builders up of the town and filled prominent places in it, are all gone. There are but few representatives of the above named families.

Orangeville is well supplied with stores presided over by men in whom the public have confidence. They have dealers in coal, fertilizers and railroad ties. Conner has facilities for supplying the community with all kinds of agricultural implements. In fact the town is as nearly independent of the outside world as a town of its size can well be.

The township surrounding the town is peopled in the main by well to do citizens. The older ones of them are all gone. Wesley Bowman and Joseph Crawford are perhaps the oldest residents of the township. The town has one older resident than the one I named, Nathan Fleckenstine. Those three have I believe, each rounded out the four score years.

When I first knew the township, the older members of the Kline, Welsh, Patterson, Achenbach, and Vance families were active citizens, now their descendants are many of them gray and bald-headed. When we think about the number who have left us, and see every thing moving on as usual, we can make up our minds as to how much we will be missed when our turn comes to leave. C.
