EN ROUTE TO PARIS EXPOSITION.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

MID OCEAN, May 20 1900.

In order to reach the Paris Exposition, we Americans must embark, There is no dry road thither. Embarkation on a great liner is an act on a great stage with comic, melodramatic and even tragic scenes. The huge vessel looms alongside the pier. The hour for sailing is all, but three hours earlier the passengers begin to arrive with bag and baggage, scrip and scrippage, some with family, a grip and an umbrella. Some in liveried carriages others on the street car. Messengers arrive with flowers, the gifts of friends. Some of the bouquets are magnificent and expensive. They are now, three days out, displayed in the steamer salon, making it look like a florist's bazaar. One huge bouquet of rare roses and orchids I am told cost at least one hundred dollars.

For an hour or more before the rooms of the great vessel are crowded. but for the most part by relatives and friends of those who have come to see | sight. the passengers off. The hour for sailing is near, the crews of the steamer are turning, but merely for practice, getting their hand in before they strike the long wet streak across the At-The ship's band breaks upon the babble of tongues with a lively promenade. Many, supposing the hour has come, rush down the plank lest they be taken to Europe unprepared; but the more experienced await the final signal, for the band will, with intermissions, play several more airs. The time for parting has come. Those who sail on the Hamburg-American Line are largely German Americans, and they either feel more or pretend to feel more, or restrain their teelings less than we undemonstrative un hyphenated Americans. They kiss, embrace and weep, and then, after a breathing spell, rush at each other and do it again. Men kiss men, and women kiss women, et vice versa ad libitum, all the while looking at each other with such looks are accustomed to see only when the coffin lid closes for the last time. Finally there is a signal for friends to leave the boat and after a last repetition of harrowing partings, the imense steel floating hotel moves slowly from the pier and then with increasing speed sails down the bay and out to sea. We had beautiful starting weather, but fine weather will not prevent sea sickness in the predisposed, for we were not out of sight of the Goddess of Liberty in New York Harbor before some of the passengers were reclining on steamer chairs and suck-

PARIS, FRANCE, May 28, 1900.

Paris, at all times a world,s center, has this year eclipsed even herself by the splendor of her universal exposition. Every nation of the world has contributed of its choicest and best. It is a dazzling, bewildering assemblage. Something like it has been seen before at Philadelphia in 1876, at Paris in 1878 and in 1889, and at Chicago in 1893, but this exposition outshines all others, not in every degree and detail, but as an ensemble. It could not be otherwise; the world has moved even since so recent an event as the Chicago exposition, and the world now will come. But I prefer these boats domes and pavilions interspersed with
