THE TWO FATHERS.

BY CAMILLE BIAS.

THE mother was a widow, an industrious woman, who worked late and early in order to support her child, a little girl between four and five years old, pretty as a fairy, full of fun, affectionate and coaxing as any happy child could be.

On the opposite side of the landing of the 67th floor on which Mme. Etiente and her daughter Lillie lived, was the door of the spariments, inhabited by two brothers-cabinet-makers by trade, and bachelors either by choice or by chance, no one knew.

One of those days when the intense heat necessitates the door being left open in order to get a current of air, the prettiness of Lillie attracted the attention of the tw brothers, who were already past their first youth, and adored children in their qual ity of approaching old bachelorhood. From that a sort of intimacy sprang up between the widow and her neighbors. Little reafrical services passed between them; they sometimes made a party of pleasure on the Sunday; so well did they get on, indeed, that one day the elder of the two brothers wid to the other:

That child would want a father badly, "That is my opinion also.

Would you have any objection to my sking the mother to marry me?"

"Why should L. In fact, I was thinking of doing the same myself; but since you have spoken first, follow the notion upsee Lillie as often as I like, I love that child as much as if she were my own. 'Forsooth! You will live with us."

The question agreed upon, the two brothers dressed in their best, went to call on Mme. Etienne, whom, however, they found confined to bed. The evening before she had walked very rapidly, in order to take some work back to the shop on time, on re turning she had caught a chlil, passed a fe verish night, and was not able to rise in the morning. She begged her neighbors go for a doctor; it was no time to speak of marriage.

Inflammation of the lungs carried away the poor woman in ten days. The funeral over, they took charge of the little one, kissing her. They said to one another, at the same time: If you wish, we will never get married

They went to live at Vincennes, so that Lillie might have plenty of good air and take walks in the wood. They were very proud of their little adopted daughter. When people stopped to look at them, and asked in a casual way which of them was her father, they replied: "Both of us."

Lillie seemed to like one as well as the other, and called them Uncle John and Uncle James.

When she was 15 years of age she was the first to suggest that she should stay at home for the future, at which, of course, the brothers were enchanted. What a charm-ing little housekeeper they had then, and with what joyful tenderness she greeted their return every evening! To say that the spoiled child never abused their goodness would be saying too much; but at leas she seized every available opportunity of pleasing them.

Two years passed over so quickly for all them, that on the day the two mer brought a cake and a bouquet to celebrate Lillie's birthday, they exclaimed:
"Seventeen years old! Is it possible?"

But, yes, it was possible. And James and John thought so much about it that it made them auxious and unhappy. It was the younger who said one even ing to the other: "Do you know that Lillie is getting more beautiful every day?"

"Eh! Yes, I know it well. And others know it, too. There must be a good many simirers prowling about here after her. "And it is certain one of them will take her away from us before very long."
"Poor little thing!"

"Yes, if she were to get a bad husband." "Oh, I should kill any man who would treat her badly."

"There is only one way of escaping that." "Ah!" said the elder brother, without making any addition to the exclamation.

"And then," continued the other, "think how sad it would be for us to part from lallie. Never again to see her trotting about the house, never to hear her merry voice singing after we return from work of an

I have been thinking of all that for a long time, my dear John."

"And it must be put an end to." 'And you plan?' 'It is very simple if it pleases you. I shall marry her before she gets fond of any-"Zounds!"

The elder brother stood up, almost threat-"Well! What is the matter?"

"I also have thought of that plan. I was often going to speak about it, but always held back." Why?

"Because I wanted to marry Lillie my-

The two brothers looked at each other far from amiably; then the younger said: This is the same as with the mother for Do you remember, James? I gave her up to you. It is your turn, now, to give up to me. You are three years older "Which, nevertheless, does not make you very young." A song was heard ascending from below Lillie was coming back from her daily shopping.

Listen," said John, rapidly. "The child who has made our happiness up to this must not be a cause of disunion between us. Let choose the one she likes best."

'All right," said the other, "that is quite

Life entered, took the two men by the teck, kissed them, and, drawing a chair be-tween them, said:

I wish to speak to you seriously." The face of the young girl looked quite

'I wish to get married."

John and I were just speaking about it. But you have not found me a husband." 'As a matter of fact we have. You love very much, you say?" "Like father and mother at once." "That is why we wish to prorpose to you o choose between us."

Why choose?" "Which of us you will marry." The young girl burst into a fit of laughter loyous, so prolonged, that the two brothers remained quite dumfounded. The brushing the tears from her eyelashes: No nonsense, my uncles. I said I want-d to speak to you seriously. You mustn't I have a sweethcart. Neither replied.

Now, you mustn't be angry, I am so fond Lim; and he is coming to morrow to see

Like that all at once. And us, Lillie?" X. Y. Weekly.

SANITATION AND FEVER.

Thousands of Lives Saved in Cubn by American Measures for Cleanliness.

Mothers of small boys, who are accustomed to solace themselves with the saying that "dirt is wholesome," are happily not acquainted with the varieties of fifth that used to bestrew and underlie the cities of Cuba. That dirt was not wholesome; it was the breeding-place of yellow-fever germs. One of the first things the Americans did, when they took possession of Cuba a year and a half ago, was to begin to remove it, says Youth's Companion.

The results of this action already appear. In 1898, the year before the American occupation, the death-rate of Havana was 85 per thousand. By the end of 1899 the rate had been lowered to 27 per thousand. For the month of April last it was about 22 per thousand.

This means a yearly saving of nearly 10,000 lives in Havana alone. It means, moreover, that this country is much less likely than it otherwise would be to experience one of those epidemies of yellow fever which, generally starting in the Cuban capital, have been promptly transplanted to the United

Such an epidemic has been known to cost this country from $10,000,000 to $15,000,000, in addition to the lives it sacrificed. We do not know what it forty feet, known as the costs to clean Cuba. It may be set down as a safe proposition, in a case of this kind, that prevention is not only "better than cure," but that it is easier and vastly less expensive.
