Story of "Nearer, My God, to Thee." The Hymn Was Written by an English Girl, Who Did Not Live to Know the Glory That Awaited It.

"As a writer, as a poet, there were few in the literary world of London [in the forties] who had not heard of Sarah Flower Adams, the gifted woman to whom all Christendom today pays homage in its love for her immortal hymn, Nearer, My God, to Thee," writes Clifford Howard in the February Ladies' Home Journal. "It was written in 1840, and had been and needs of agricultural education in subsequently set to music by Eliza Flower, and included in a collection of hymns written and composed by the two sisters. Only within that year had their book of 'Hymns and Anthems' been published, and the hymn that was destined to inspire the world had then been heard but once or twice, and within the walls of a single church-South Palace Chapel, Lon-

"It was not, however, until after the year 1860, when the present wellknown tune was composed for it by Dr. Lowell Mason, of New York, that the hymn attained its widespread popularity. Up to that time it had attracted but little notice. Through the spirit of Dr. Mason's sympathetic Horticultural Association, Mr. Gabmusic it was quickened into glorious riel Hiester, of the State Horticulural hie and brought within the reach of every congregation and every Christian soul. But this was long after the author of the hymn had passed away. She died in 1848, without knowing of the triumph and the glory that awaited her work. Her grave in the little village of her birth is unmarked by any monument to her fame."

Smaller Visiting Cards.

The new visiting cards, so much reduced in size, are so much more dainty, appropriate and lady like than the useless breadth and length of cardboard so long in vogue. Some of the French styles are as small as the name and address will permit, says the New York Post. Roman lettering has increased in popularity, and with ultra fashionable women has for the moment superseded script, and certainly has the advantage of being more legible and of allowing the use of a much smaller card.

An important meeting in the inter-It la Larger Than the Domain of Some of the Nations of the est of education in Agriculture and Forestry was held Jan 23 at the De-Barth.

The arid region of this country is larger than the entire area of some of the nations of the earth, says a writer in the Saturday Evening Post. It in cludes portions of Montana, Wyoming Colorado, Utah, Nevada, Arizona and New Mexico, and smaller portions of North and South Dakota, Nevada Kansas, Texas, hundreds of thou-sands of acres in California two-thirds of Oregon, one-third of Washington, and almost all Idaho - altogether a total of ter 1,000,000 square miles, enough, in fact to accommodate one-half the people of the United States when the land is made productive. To allow all this splendid country to go to waste would be contrary to the spirit of a practical nation.

All this arid land needs is irrigation Already a large part of it has been converted to fertility by the artificial supply of water. Gradually and strongly the experts of the government have urged upon congress a policy of assist ance which will convert many of these acres into fertile fields. In this way the suggestion has come that to the river and harbor bill there shall be added a provision for storage reser voirs in the far west. If it should be done land that is now of no practical value would be worth $10 or $20 an acre, and thus it happens that far western influences are openly in favor of the proposition. Something like $5,000,000 is the first suggestion in the way of the new departure.
