AARON BURR'S TRIAL FOR TREASON

The Most Impressive Court Scene Ever Witnessed in This Country.

"No court in this country has ever presented a more impressive spectacle than on the day when the third Vice-President of the United States was arraigned as a traitor," writes William Perrine in the February Ladies' Home Journal. "On the bench sat the most renowned of all the long list of jurists of the Supreme Court, John Marshall, and the courtroom and the streets about the famous Capitol [Rich mond], which still exists among the most venerated of the historic build ings of Virginia, were crowded with witnesses, lawyers and public men from all parts of the country. Burr was not proved to be guilty under the indictment and the evidence submitted. His beautiful, brilliant daughter. Theodosia, radiant with joy, appeared in the streets of the town for a long walk with her father, amid the admiration of his partisans. She had won the hearts of even his enemies with her beauty and still more with her filial devotion. The further proceedings which had been meditated by the Federal Government were dropped, for Burr's most uncharitable foes must have been satisfied with the new outbursts of popular feeling which his acquittal raised against him. He could not appear in public without taking the risk of personal insult or of being mobbed."

Mortgagees Should Beware.

A case heard by Judge Kelley, of Scranton, resulted in a manner which should prove of general interest to mortgagees. The object of the suit was to take possession of property on claws. which a mortgage had been held for thirty years. In his charge to the jury Judge Kelley pointed out that the mortgagee had died in the meantime and that according to law the other party to the contract could not also it is presumed that a mortgage is plaintiff could not give evidence, and for the same reason neither could his wife. Thirty years had elapsed and the mortgage by law was satisfied ten years ago. Unless the plaintiff can find some remedy he will lose all.

A Diptneria Cure.

The Scientific American gives this receipt as one which the world ought to know. At the first indications of dipthena in the throat of a child, make the room close, and then take a cup and pour into it a quantity of tar and turpentine, equal parts. Hold the cup ed and sent to Oyster Bay. over the fire so as to fill the room with fumes. The patient, on inhaling the fumes, will cough up and spit out all membraneous matter. and the diphtheria will pass out. The fumes of tar and turpentine loosens the throat and affords a relief that has baffled the skill of physicians.

TEDDY SHOOTS A LION. President-Elect Roosevelt

Brings Down a Big Catomount and Saves a Companion.

Vice

In a taxidermist's shop in Meeker, CoL, the body of a mountain lion is being mounted. It is not unlike several other beasts which have been brought there from the neighboring county, but never before has one been brought in which attracted so much attention, for this animal was killed by Vice President-elect Theodore Roosevelt. There is a story connected with the killing of the lion, for in sending a bullet through its neck at just the right time Mr. Roosevelt not only brought to earth his first lion, but saved the life of one of his companions in the chase, Dr. Gerald B. Webb, of Colorado Springs. As it was, the animal fell upon the physician, knocked him to the ground and made several ugly wounds with its sharp

Accompanied by John Goff, a guide Gov. Roosevelt, Dr. Webb, "Dick" Stone and A. G. Wallihan started from Meeker for the Keystone ranch 36 miles northeast of there. Four miles from the city the hounds struck a scent and led the hunters on a hot give evidence. According to the law chase of eight miles. When the dogs were overtaken the lion had sought satisfied after twenty years. Thus the refuge in a tree. Dismounting, the hunters stood near by and discussed who was to do the shooting. All wanted Mr. Roosevelt to do it, but he unselfishly declined. Finally lots were drawn and the vice presidentelect pulled the longest straw. Meantime the lion had done some thinking, for just as Col. Roosevelt raised his rifle, the beast sprang straight for the men. A bullet from the colonel's rifle met it in midair, penetrating the brute's neck and breaking its backbone. It fell with tremendous force on Dr. Webb. "Dick" Stone brought the body of the beast back, and says the colonel is delighted with the trophy of the hunt. It will be mount-

Door of St. Peter's.

Significance of the Imposing Ceremonial Which is Under the Direct Supervision of His Holfness, the Pope.

As all Catholics and many Protestants are aware, the closing year of the century is a jubilee year in the Roman Catholic church. Many ceremonies have taken place to mark the period. but of these note have been or are more imposing than the opening and closing of the Holy Door at St. Peter's cathedrai. The opening ceremony was witnessed a year ago, and the closing took place on Christmas eve. Owing to the delicate state of the present pope's health, the building in which the opening and closing ceremonies took place had been heated to the temperature of Leo XIIL's private aparments to avoid any possibility of his holiness taking a chill.

The ceremony of opening the Holy Door is declared to be symbolical of the fact that the church is open to all men so long as they go there after a thorough and sincere conversion. When the pope opens the door the three knocks which he gives to it represents the three continents-Europe, Africa and Asia-to which the pope offers the treasures which he is the medium for dispensing. The three strokes also are looked upon as symbolizing the joy that the jubilee causes to the faithful of Heaven, Earth and Purgatory. The pope, who is seated on a raised throng in front of the large door in the middle of the grand portico, remains stationary for a brief while, until the prince of the throne presents a golden hammer to his holiness, which the latter takes in his right hand, and, rising from his throne, goes and knocks at the Holy

First-Retailers shall close and lock their bar-rooms not later than 10:30 o'clock at night, and shall not sell or furnish any liquor at night after that hour.

Second-No game of chance, free lunch, music, or other methods of attracting custom shall be allowed in or about the room where intoxicants are sold.

Open Weather Favorable to Quail.

An experienced hunter says that if this is an open winter there will be more quail in this section by the time the hunting season opens next fall than there has been for years. It is the deep snow and cold weather that kills the greatest number of quails, and not the hunters, as when the ground is covered with deep snow and frozen they cannot get a food supply and consequently starve.

several professions for so many years that it is hard to say in which one he is most popular. He and Mrs. Wyntt (Miss Violet Melnotte) built and still own the Duke of York's theater. Mr. Wyatt succeeded George Grossmith in the Gilbert and Sullivan operas and his duke of Plazatora (in "The Gondoliers") was one of the most humorous performances ever seen at the Savoy.

THE FIREMAN CAUGHT HIM.

He has been 16 times to America, making a brilliant tour on one occasion with a company of Italian pantomimists.

The following blunder of a Drury Lane fireman occurred when Mr. Wyatt was playing in "La Fille de Mme. Angot." One night he left the Lane earlier than usual to go to an at home, having dressed in his room at the theater. He had just gone through the stage door, when he recollected a message that he had been commissioned to give to one of the ladies. So he turned and hurried back into the theater. "Stop! You can't go in there, sir!" exclaimed the fireman on duty. But Mr. Wyatt took no notice and ran across the stage, as the curtain was down, pursued by the fireman, who caught him up as he reached the opposite side, with the indignant protest: "You mustn't come here, sir. This is behind the scenes!" "I know it is!" said Mr. Wyatt, "but I'm a member of the company. Don't you recognize me? I am Frank Wyatt!" I beg your pardon, sir!" exclaimed the fireman, "but I thought you were a gentleman!"

and the just will enter in," etc. After this the grand master knocks down the wall which incloses the Holy Door, the wall being so lightly put together, however, that its four sides are held together but slightly, the stones of which it is composed not being cemented. Thus, no sooner has the pope knocked at the Holy Door than it falls without any resistance. The debris of the wall is distributed among the worshipers.

who hasten to gather it in order to put it among their precious relies. While this is taking place the popu reseats himself on the throne, but after the demolition is completed the peniitentiaries of St. Peter take their brooms, clean the floor, remove the pieces of brick and mortar from the passage-which are not looked upon as material to be held in light esteem, since relics are made of them-and wash the moldings and all round the door with holy water. This work being finished, his holiness once more de seends from his throne, singing the an them which opens with the words: "Haec dies quam fecit Dominus." etc. which the choir continues to sing after him. Arriving at the Holy Door the pope recites some prayers, takes the cross, kneels before the door, intones the Te Deum, and, rising again while singing, passes through the Holy Door his elergy following him. Everybody who can goes into St. Peter's to witness this superb ceremony or to take 'part in the vespers at the papal chapel. After the vespers the cardinals take off their robes and put on their red capes, accompany the pope to the door of his private apartments, and then retire.

After the morning mass on Christmas day his holiness goes to the lodge of the Benediction, where he blesses the faithful in the form which is only used on the occasion of the jubilee. The closing of the door is a very similar ceremony to the opening. The greatest solemnity is observed, and thousands of privileged pilgrims flock to the cathedral to be witnesses of what, except in rare instances, occurs but once in a lifetime. His holiness lays the first
