FEDERATED AUSTRALIA.

Edmund Barton, Famous New South Wales Statesman, to Be Its First Premier.

Edmund Barton has accepted the warl of Hopetoun's offer to form the first cabinet of the Federation of Australia. A writer in the Review of Re-Riews in 1895, speaking of Edmund Barton, said: "Next, perhaps, to Sir Henry Parkes, Edmund Barton is. among New South Wales politicians, best entitled to be called a statesman. Intellectually he is, speaking comparstively, a giant. I have met many people of importance, but I have never met a man who could say finer things on the spur of the moment than Edmund Barton. 'I would be ready at any time to play second fiddle to Barton,' said Sir George Dibbs to me; and, be added. 'if I had Barton's intellect with my own energy, I could rule Australia.' At 21 he was an M. A. of the Sydney university, and he is one of the best types of the highly educated native-born Australian. In a legislature which, with all its faults, is singularly sensitive about the dignity of the speaker's office, the most honorable under the constitution, he is recognized as perhaps the best speaker we have ever had in New South Wales. He occupied that position for over five years, and it is something to win distinction in an office which had been held by Sir Daniel Cooper, Sir Terence Aubrey Murray, Sir John Hay, William Munnings Arnold, Sir George Wigram Allen, and the dignity of which is now supported by Sir Joseph Abbott. He was one of the few who grasped at the convention the great difficulties surrounding federation, and one of the three who, in what Sir George Dibbs describes as the 'whisky and paste' excursion up the Hawkesbury river in the Lucinda, drafted the common-wealth bill."

His ability was recognized by assigning him to the difficult post at Dublin, where much tact and firmness, a ready tongue and pleasing personality are required Mr. Wyndham has much Irish wit which he comes by through his descent from the Sheridan family. He is, however an English aristocrat of the deepest Tye. His wife was the widow of the PREEZE AND ELWELL, Attys. duke of Westminster's eldest son, and the still calls herself, as English usage permits, Countess Grosvenor, although married to Mr. Wyndham.

Sample of Boston Thrift. Just before his death, which oc-curred in 1790, Benjamin Franklin left in Bloomsburg, County and State aforesaid, on $5,000 to the city of Boston, and an equal sum to Philadelphia, with instructions that the money was to be invested for 100 years, and then deroted to certain public objects. The Boston legacy now amounts to $366,-880, and that of Philadelphia to a little over $100,000. The Boston managers

Children Are Fond of Red. It has been noticed by the matrons of infant asylums that a baby will be eross all day if dressed in a gray frock. but contented and happy if dressed in bright red garment. Children from two to four years old are much less affected by the color of their dress. It is commonly observed in kindergartens that the younger children prefer the red playthings, while the older chil-dren prefer the blue.
