William J. Bryan Pays Tribute to Martyr President.

fays That Assansin's Deed Exalted the Victim's Place in History-Words That Will Live Long In Many Hearts.

Under the heading "God's Will, Not Durs, Be Done," W. J. Bryan says in the Commoner:

"These were the last words of President McKinley as he bade farewell to the loving companion of his life, to whom his kindness and devotion have been so constant and conspicuous. It was with this beautiful spirit of resignation that he turned from the realities of earth to explore the mysteries of the world beyond.

"The struggle was over-the struggle of a week during which hope and fear alternately gained the mastery. The book of life is closed and his achievements are a part of history. After he became conscious that the end was drawing near, but before the shadows quite obscured the light, he was heard to murmur some of the words of "Nearer, My God, to Thee." This sacred hymn contains several lines inspired by Jacob's night at Bethel:

"Though like a wanderer, The sun gone down, Darkness be over me, My rest a stope."

"Thus do the lines immortalize the pillow which to Jacob must have seemed hard indeed-the pillow which, when morning came, the patriarch would not have exchanged for the softest one on which a weary head was ever laid.

"The terrible deed at Buffalo, rudely breaking the ties of family and friendship and horrifying every patriotic citizen, crowns a most extraordinary life with a halo that cannot but exalt its victim's place in history, while his bravery during the trying ordeal, his forgiving spirit and his fortitude in the final hours give glimpses of his inner life which nothing less tragic could have revealed.

"But, inexpressibly sad as is the death of McKinley, the illustrious cit-

Yellow Chicago Baby Gets Its Name Amid Din of Tom Toms and with Quaint Ceremonies,

Hong Wong, son of Moy Sing Wong, was christened at the Chicago joss house amid the din of tom toms and fiddles, with the quaint and curious ceremonies of the Celestial people.

CHINESE CHRISTENING.

Moy Sing, proud father of the fiveweeks-old, afterwards stood host at the prominent citizens of the Chinese quar ter, and provided for them a feast of native dainties that would have cost Hip Lung, Chicago's Chinese Croesus, a full week's profits. But as Moy Sing runs the restaurant he could afford it. The feast began at five o'clock in the afternoon, before the christening, and continued until daylight. Sam Moy. the king of Chinatown, acted as toast master. But the priest, who presided at the christening at the joss house, was a greater man.

The joss house, says the Chicago Amercan, is at 319 Clark street. Its hideous carved gods are hidden in a back room on the second floor. Five hundred of their devotees bowed before them when the ceremonies began at nine o'clock. The priest, garbed in flowing robes, led them with young Hong Wong in his arms.

When the first prayers had been mumbled the official barber came and blocked out on the baby's head the spot where the queue, when he should be big enough to have one, should grow. Every inch of the infant's head, save one tiny spot in the middle, was shaven smooth.

The mother of Hong Wong was barred from the christening. In her place a female relative bore the child. in a gorgeous baby dress of red silk, up to the sanctuary of the joss and announced that the name of the mite would be Hong Wong.

At this Moy Sing began a protest, insisting that no child of his should go through life with a name like that. He kept up his clamor until several relatives locked him up in the back room and let the christening go on. Moy Sing did not care much, for it was all part of the ritual.

He Sent Vice President Hobart's Card to a Senator Instead of His Own.

A Baltimore newspaper man once came over to Washington to do some interviewing of public men, says a Washington correspondent of the Philadelphia North American. It was when Garret A. Hobart was vice president, and he called upon that distin-Mun Fong Low restaurant to all the guished New Jerseyan first. Then, with fear and trembling, he went to the residence of a senator who was noted for frigidity toward representatives of the press. He sent up his card and expected to be sent a curt refusal to be seen. What was his astonishment when the lackey came downstairs, bowed profoundly and said that Senator So-and-So would be down in just a minute, and would he be so good as to make himself at home meanwhile. In less than that time the statesman came down the staircase at a pace that made the reporter fear for the safety of his limbs.

"Ah! Mr. Hobart, delighted to see you," he said, as he entered, with his hand outstretched, and before his eyes had become accustomed to the darkened parlor. Then, of a sudden, he drew himself up stiffly, fumbled in his waistcoat, pulled out the card that had been sent to him, and demanded: "What do you mean by this imposi-tion, sir?" Like lightning it flashed the following described property, to wit: All on the newspaper man what had happened. His apologies were ample, but the senator could not be induced to forgive that thrilling dash down the slippery staircase simply to accommodate a mere scribbler.

75,000,000 hearts into one and brings a hush to the farm, the factory and the forum.

"One of the many striking and touching incidents occurring at Buffalo was the meeting between the president and Mrs. McKinley for the first time after the assault. The dispatches report that Mrs. McKinley took a seat at the bedside and held the president's hand. The distinguished sufferer looked into the face of his good wife and said in a low tone: 'We must bear up; it will be better for us both.' With tears streaming down her cheeks Mrs. Me-Kinley nodded assent.

"There is a depth of pathos in this little incident that must appeal forcefully to those who appreciate the strength of the ties that bind a good husband to a good wife.

"There may be some people who have no idea of the thoughts that were passing through the minds of this couple at that moment. There are, however, many others who can Imagine what these thoughts were. There, on the bed of pain, lay the strong, powerful man. By his side sat the frail woman, whose physical weakness has been for so many years the subject of this husband's tender solicitude. In an humble way they began life together. Two little graves had for them a common interest. In prosperity and in adversity they had stood together, participating equally in the joys and sharing equally in the sorrows of life. The wife had shared in the great honors that had come to her husband, and now, when the very summit of political ambition had been reached and political honors had become so common that the conveniences of a quiet, domestic life were longed for by the woman, in order, as she often expressed it, that she might have her husband to herself. the bullet of an assassin had done the work that threatened to blast the highest ambition of this woman's life.

"'We must bear up,' said the president; 'it will be better for us both.' It matters not to what extent other men and women may have grieved; it matters not how many tears other men and women may have shed and how much other hearts may have sched. All of this grief and woe could not have been so acute as was the grief and woe which this man and voman suppressed in compliance with the suggestion: 'It will be better for us both.' " time?" And she certainly did, asserts the Philadelphia Times.

She began by taking her papa's necktie box out of the bureau drawer and displaying all the neckties on the bed, where she thought they could be seen to much better advantage. The box wasn't interesting, so she threw that under the bed. Next she took a toy lamp to pieces, but as that wasn't quite exciting enough as a lamp study, she followed it up with even greater attention to the regular one, threw its wick out of the window, and poured the oil down the front of her dress.

Then she picked off the wall about half a yard square of paper, and powdered the bits on the floor with the contents of a taleum powder box. The pin tray on the bureau didn't suit her, so she broke that in two pieces and added the pins and trinkets to the scraps of paper and talcum powder. Next she turned her attention to a bottle of vaseline and rubbed it on her face and into her hair. A shower of photographs lay around the room in a fashion that would have done credit to the ambidextrous Keller or Herrmann. This done Kathryne was just about to lay hold of her mother's shoes when that lady herself appeared. The baby tossed the pair of shoes over her head packward and said: "See them go." There was plenty of "go," indeed, and all in about five minutes' time, too.

This is a true story.
