Berwick day (last Friday) at the Bloomsburg Fair was the largest in its history. Between 2,000 and 3,000 people from here went down by railroad and trolley. And, say! generally speaking, we're a pretty warm combination up here just beyond this end of the trolley line.—Berwick Independent.

Says He Was An Accomplice.

A dispatch in the Philadelphia Inquirer from Pottsville, says that the Sheriff of Schuylkill County, has received a query from Stouts Mountains, Alabama, asking whether "Kit Kanil" alias John Dongan is wanted for the murder of Alexander Rae. The crime was committed at a point somewhere between Centralia and Mt. Carmel, in the fall of 1868. He was the paymaster, and he was killed for the money that he was supposed to have on his person. They were disappointed, however, as $19.00 was all they got.

In 1869, or one year after the crime, a man by the name of Donahue was tried for it, but was acquitted. The case was again revived several years later by the arrest of a trio composed of Hester, Tully and McHugh. These men were tried, and convicted. The evidence against them was furnished by an accomplice named Kelley, who made a full confession. They were hanged in Bloomsburg. If the following dispatch is true, and Dongan is tried, it will according to law, take place here. The dispatch concludes with the following:

"It is understood that Dongan has confessed that he assisted to murder Alexander Rae, near Centralia, during the reign of the Mollie Maguires in the anthracite region. The Schuylkill county officials are considering the advisability of having requisition papers made out and having the self-confessed murderer brought here for trial. This is the last echo of the famous Mollie Maguire outrages, which stirred the entire country during the centennial year."
