A SILK STRING CURE.

Novel Self-Treatment That Proved Effective in a Severe Case of Lumbago.

In Gen. F. C. Latrobe's varied and extensive mail during the past year there have been hundreds of letters begging him to send the writers some of his renowned silken strings for the cure of lumbago, reports the Baltimore

While Gen. Latrobe was attending the sessions of the last legislature, and was incidentally nursing a severe case of lumbago, S. W. Pattison met him one day and suggested that if he would simply tie a silk string about his waist next to the skin he would be cured. The general experienced an unusually severe twinge that night, and in desperation ordered his man servant, Robert, to tie on the string. From that time the lumbago began to depart until the next day, when it entirely disappeared. Gen. Latrobe was enabled to stay in Annapolis.

The story of his cure becoming noised abroad, letters began to come in by the score, until finally, in order to find time to attend to any other business, Gen. Latrobe referred all letters to his man Robert, whom he thereupon gave the name of Dr. Wilson. Since that time "Dr." Wilson, specialist in lumbago, has been making a tidy little income selling silk strings of the proper curative kind.

FEW ROYAL DIVORCES.

Separations Have Not Been Numerons Among the Titled During the Last Century.

A royal divorce is a very rare event; indeed, those which have taken place during the last century-even including the most famous of all, that of Emperor Napoleon I. and his unfortunate consort, Josephine - may be counted on the fingers of one hand, says the Detroit Free Press. To these grounds of hopeless incompatibility of temper, of two of Queen Victoria's several sisters, of whom the bestknown are the empress of Russia and land.
