The N. Y. World—Thrice-a-Week Edition.
The Most Widely Read Newspaper in America.

Time has demonstrated that the Thrice-a-Week World stands alone in its class. Other papers have imitated its form but not its success.
This is because it tells all the news all the time and tells it impartially, whether that news be political or otherwise. It is, in fact, almost a daily at the price of a weekly and you cannot afford to be without it.
Republican and Democrat alike can read the Thrice-a-Week World with absolute confidence in its truth.

In addition to news, it publishes first-class serial stories and other features suited to the home and breside.
The Thrice-a-Week World's regular subscription price is only $1.00 per year and this pays for 156 papers. We offer this unequalled newspaper and THE COLUMBIAN together for $1.70.
The regular subscription price of the two papers is $2.00. tf

A Pearl-gray line in the tender East.
Like to a nun new-blessed at prayers the Dawn came forth from cloister of the Night. The velvet buds trembled ecstatically and the birds in the branches of the greening trees twittered minor notes of sweet expectancy. The paling stars withdrew from stream and lake their myriad reflections but in the bosom of the waters grew a steadier light born of the constant skies. Then suddenly upon the tremulous air broke the mellow chime of bells. Full, soft and deep the measured tones proclaimed the tidings of great joy. "I am the resurrection and the life," they seemed to say. Straightway the Dawn put on a roscate hue and all the chirping birds burst forth in rapturous song.

Then down the dim aisle of a church fragrant with fair flowers came one to kneel before the altar, chanting thus:

Heart-sick of doubt and heavy-footed I Creep back to thee, O Master of the days, A lonely voice beneath the far-stretched sky,
A dust speck blown innumerable ways.

And a voice from the altar answered him:

However shod he yet wins to the goal
Who sees not with the eyes, but with the soul.

Then came another, delicate and frail; the rustle of fine silken skirts followed her, but in her eyes great Want had made a home. And thus she prayed:

The rich, deep color of the rose that blushed
At ardent gaze of yester-summer's stars, Death careless feet to formless dust is crushed—See on my brow its thorns have left their scars.

And the voice from the altar answered her:

All things through pain return at last to Me,
On every brow the sweat of blood must be.

Another came, tall, high-browed, stooped and pale with pouring over books in search of Truth. He, kneeling, cried aloud:

One year ago the lily springing up Pushed back the crest of Winter in its name, Where now the fragrance of its blessed cup?
Where now the beauty of its sacred flame?

Out of the depths the voice replied:

Still one by one the stones are rolled away
The lilies fade, the lily is for aye.

And then came one upon whose handsome face a cloud of sorrow rested heavily. Upon the rail he bowed his proud young head to murmur:

One year ago she knelt beside me here Co-kiss the book and murmur "Love is All!" Co-day my soul goes crying far and near—
There is no answer to its wailing call.

Then a great voice filled the church, and all kneeling there were struck with awe at sound of it. It said: "This be my answer to all prayers, all doubts, all tears!"

The velvet buds are on the branches' tips—Think thou her kisses died upon her lips?
I come, I go, take all forms for my own,
I Love eternal! Love and make no moan.

Then the church was still, and the world was still, save for the soft inquiring call of a robin in a distant tree top.
And as the devotees passed out of the holy church the sun came up the East, flooding the earth with glory and making all his own.

TALK NO. 12.
Distance.
There are some people who can read and sew for almost any length of time without becoming tired. They do not have headache or any of the usual symptoms of eye strain. But there distance vision is not good. They find it difficult to read signs distinctly or to recognize people when they meet. This is a defective condition and should receive professional attention without delay. While there seems to be no symptoms of overwork, the eyes are really upon a strain almost constantly. They are not in perfect focus and are compelled to make an extra effort at all times. This effort will eventually injure the eyes and the symptoms and irritation will appear when it is too late. If you find that you do not see at a distance as well as you ought to, I want to see you. I want you to tell me all about your eyes. I will show you glasses that will make your vision clear and will advise you how to care for and preserve your sight. I do not charge for consultation.
