A new swindler is capturing some of the New York farmers. A man comes around offering a patent wagon tongue. The farmer does not buy, but the agent leaves the tongue to be called for in a few days. Shortly another of the gang comes and sees the tongue, is very favorably impressed with it and offers $400 for it. The farmer thinks he sees his chance to make some money, sends the first man $250 for the right to handle the entirely unsatisfactory to the western tongue, and that is the end of the matter. Now that the public is reassured of the welfare of Mr. Roosevelt, it may be stated that there is considerable relief felt by the republican managers that his western trip was interrupted. Chairman Griggs of the democratic Congressional Committee recently made public a statement in which he said that the President was doing yeoman's work for the democratic party and that opinion is largely held by the President's political associates. His utterances in regard to the trusts, in the light of the unwillingness of the republican party to adopt any remedy which would afford genuine relief from the trust evils, were bound, sooner or later, to result in a vastly increased democratic vote. His statement on the tariff question proved people. They were palpably lacking in enthusiasm and in certainty of conviction. To the most casual observer, it was evident that the President's personal convictions were not expressed in his utterances and he is a poor "River coal," said a wholesale deal- dissembler. The tariff is a local issue, and when tariff revision is undertaken in Congress every Congressman strives with mighty effort to preserve or increase the duties on these schedules in which his own constituents are interested.
