WALKING AS A REGREATION.

No Better Panacea For Tired Nerves and Jaded Spirits.

The pleasure and benefit to be en joyed from walking are not fully appreciated. For tired nerves and jaded spirits, for mental and physical dyspepsia, there is no finer panacea than a long steady walk; not the walk ing incidental to swinging a golf club, or the aimless ramble that so often masquerades as a walk, but a tramp out in the green fields and woods, over the hills or by the streams that lie close at hand, too often all unknown and unenjoyed.

The rapid increase of out-of-door sports, while excellent in its way, has to a certain extent thrust aside the claims of walking as a recreation and exercise. Greater facilities of locomotion such as the electric road, the automobile and the bicycle, by which one's destination is quickly reached, have also done much to dislodge the slower walk from public favor, so that comparatively few know the joy of walking with a few congeniai companions, out and away from hot, dusty, noisy streets into the refreshing and peaceful country round about.

are well aware of the health-giving character of this form of exercise: they are, and always have been great walkers, thinking nothing of a tramp of six, eight or ten miles, and their vigorous frames and ruddy complexion bear witness to the good to be derived.

Americans, fortunately, are at last learning to walk More and more in recent years has it become the custom for walking parties to start off for a day's jaunt into the country, returning at night rested in mind and scarcely fatigued in body; with a zest of life and appreciation of nature to be gained in no other exercise.

Walking has many advantages. It entails no expense as does riding or driving, wheeling or golfing, so all can indulge in it; it brings into play every muscle of the body, yet overstrains none of them; it gives opportunity for coming into close touch with nature, to enjoy her every aspect, to learn the trees and the flowers and the birds, their seasons and habits and songs; and it adds strength and length to one's life, keeping mind and body quick, alert and youthful.

The most beautiful scenery, the loveliest wild flowers and the most varied and picturesque walks in Pennsylvania are right at our doors waiting to be enjoyed. It is a pleasure to be had for the seeking, and one that more and more of our citizens should appropriate for themselves in this the most delightful season of the year. Let walking become a general pastime for young and old, for men and women, and its beneficent influence will be soon felt in the community.

Flowers for May 30tb.

From present indications the old standbys for floral decoration purposes on Memorial Day, lilacs, snowballs and mock orange, will have flowered and faded away by the time that day comes around, owing to the early spring. However, the red of the rose has already appeared, and a new garden flower will evidently be used on that day.

JOHN BROWN'S BODY.

Authentic Story of Origin of the Famous War Song.

Oshkosh (Wis.) Banker, Who Was One of the Original Quartette That Sang It in 1861, Talks About Its Composition.

Efforts by veterans of the great civil war to discover the authors of "John Brown's Body" from the ash heap of time, have brought to light the history of the stirring song.

A man in Oshkosh is able to tell the story, for he was one of the original quartette that sang it over 40 years ago, and he assisted in the evolution of the song. This modest veteran of the rebellion, who was one of the men who made the memorable escape from the tunnel at Libbey prison, is James Howard Jenkins, president of the German national bank of Oshkosh.

This is how Mr. Jenkins tells of the birth of the song: In the early spring of 1861 the Boston light infantry, a battalion of three companies, under command of Maj. Rogers, of the Boston Journal, was sent to Fort Warren. in Boston harbor, for drill and garrison duty. This battalion was made up largely of the better class of city boys The Englishman and Scotchman and was to Boston what the Seventh regiment was to New York.

When the demand for troops became pressing the battalion offered its services, which, however, could not be accepted, save as it could be incorporated in one of the regiments then forming. Accordingly the battalion disbanded and a rush was made by its members to enlist in the Twelfth and Thirteenth regiments. The Twelfth was completed first and was sent to Fort Warren for organization and drill.

Among its members were many excellent singers. One of the male quartettes was composed of four sergeants -Jenkins, Brown, Edgerley and Eldredge-who were continually on the lookout for a good marching mel-

"John Brown's body lies a mouldering in the grave. "His soul is marching on."

"Glory, glory, Hallelujah!" The following is a pretty good story | In searching for a fitting tune they that you need not believe if you don't adapted an old camp meeting melody want to: A farmer out in Ohio had a sung by the colored Methodists at the sident's petitioners. The song "took" at once, and the simplicity of the chorus, with its swing and lilt, made it at once popular. The verses that followed were improvised from time to time. > "We lament the death of Col. Ellsworth, And his pets (his Zouaves) will meet him on the way."

The second tenor of the quartette was a short, broad-shouldered Scotchman named John Brown. When he put on his knapsack for the first time, with his red-lined overcoat rolled on the boys laughed at him. But quick witted and good-natured, he retorted by marching up and down, singing:

"John Brown's knapsack is strapped upon his back."

This was straightway added to the list of verses. "We'll hang Jeff Davis to a sour apple tree" was the natural expression of a rampant Massachusetts man. On Saturday afternoons Gilmore's band came to the fort to play at dress parade, and large numbers of visitors were also present. One Saturday the quartette went with Gilmore into one of the casemates and sang the song to him, he following with his cornet till he had fixed the air in his memory. On his return to Boston he had it arranged for his band. The following Saturday it was played for the first time in front of the Twelfth Massachusetts volunteer infantry at dress parade at Fort Warren, Boston harbor. On its way to the front the regiment passed through New York and dined on City Hall square. When the articles should never be used except line was formed to march down Broadway to the ferry the band struck up "John Brown," and the regiment sang it to the cheers and shouting and excitement of the thousands that lined

Of the original quartette, John Brown was drowned while crossing a swollen stream near Fort Royal. Eldredge died some years ago. Edgerley at last accounts was living in Boston. WASHINGTON.

From our Regular Correspondent.

Washington, May 25, 1903. If any further evidence were needed that Postmaster General Payne was seeking by every means at his command to prevent the revelations of corruption in the Postoffice Department, it has been furnished by his treatment of the charges of Seymour Tulloch, formetly cashier of the Washington city postoffice. When Tulloch's charges, which had been prepared at the special request of the Postmaster General, were received Mr. Payne characterized them as "hot air", a "stump speech", "nothing but words", etc. Taking the verdict of the Postmaster General the public was prepared to believe that Mr. Tulloch had failed to make good his charges. Then, in defense of his position, Tulloch made public his statement and the public were amazed to find that his charges were of most serious import and were accompanied by abundant detail. Later the Postmaster General announced that in any instances where he could ascertain that alleged employees of the Department had enjoyed a sinecure, performing no work, which Tailoch alleged in a number of instances, the Department would immediately begin prosecution to recover the salaries paid. While on its face this appeared to be an expression of great virtue, the inspectors are aghast at the announcement which they say will mean the absolute closing of every avenue of information that might have remained open to them. It will be recalled that when Mr. Payne removed Machen, a step which the inspectors looked to as absolutely essential because it would give employees sufficient confidence to enable the inspectors to get information from them, the Postmaster General immediately took occasion to discharge an employee who had made charges which he could not substantiate, so as to nullify the effect of Machen's removal. Now, say the inspectors, the Postmaster General has rendered all their efforts futile by his latest pronunciamento. The question everyone is asking is, "Will the President sanc tion this sort of proceeding?" but it is admitted that only the removal of the Postmaster General would efface the impression he has so studiously created, that every person who imparts in formation regarding the scandal will get into trouble.

According to a memorial which will be presented to the President on his return from the west, thirty-three trusts are squeezing the life out of an importent industry, the manufacture of agricultural machinery. There is, it seems, one agricultural machinery trust which, because it mines the ore and provides the raw material from which it makes its products, is independent of the trusts and it makes 90 per cent of the agricultural machinery of the country. The remaining to per cent. is made by various independent companies and these are the Premust pay "tribute", is too long for re-production here. The petitioners claim that these trusts have put up the price on everything they have to buy, "arbitrarily and unnecessarily" until they have become "as mere errand boys" for the large concerns. They say this has even curtailed the crops of the country because of the enhanced price of necessary machinery. The chief grievance is against the Steel Trust and the President and Congress are urged to take remedial

Some remarkable figures regarding pension applications have been prepared by Pension Commissioner Ware-These show that over 22 per cent. of the men enlisting for service in the Spanish war have filed applications for pensions and this, notwithstanding the fact that less than 10 per cent. saw actual service. Thirteen thousand pensions have been allowed thus far, 18,185 applications have been rejected, and 34.210 claims are still pending. New applications are, moreover, coming in daily by the hundred and it is estimated that before the close of the fiscal year fifty per cert of the men so enlisted will have

The question of sovereignty over the Isle of Pines has now become involved and there is a faction in the Cuban congress which pelieves that both subjects should be treated in one convention. Meanwhile, the surveys of the land site and the channels leading to Guantanamo harbor are being completed.

The question of the disposition of some ordinance which belonged to Spain but was not removed from Cuban forts is occasioning some trouble to the State and War Departments. Spain failed to remove these guns during the occupation by the United States because she hoped this country would buy them. The United States did not want them and now Cuba claims the title which claim Spain disputes.
