SWORDFISH KILLS WHALE.

Fierce Battle Between Monsters of the Deep Witnessed by Steamer Passengers.

A sanguinary battle between deep sea monsters, in which a whale was killed by a "thrasher," aided by a swordfish, was witnessed by the officers of the Pacific Coast Steamship company's City of Topeka on the last trip of that vessel. The battle was fought at the entrance of Queen Charlotte sound. When it was over the water for several hundred yards around was red with blood, says a Seattle report. First Officer J. S. Lawrence, in telling of it, said: "The swordfish was not visible during the fight, but from what I know of similar battles, it is probable that he was underneath the water engaged in prodding the whale. Every time the swordfish, which is generally 12 or 14 feet long, struck the monster the monster would rise out of the water. The 'thrasher' would jump completely out of the sea, and, spinning around on its head for a few seconds until it had the head of the whale located, it would then descend with a splash that looked like a building toppling into the sea and strike the whale. The latter would then start to sound or dive, but the swordfish would prod it from underneath until it rose out of the water to again be struck by the thrasher. "This was repeated time and time again. The noise of the fight was loud enough to be heard for miles. Eventually the whale began to spout streams of blood, and, as the passengers passed out of sight, his awkward motions became feebler and feebler."

WASHINGTON.

From our Regular Correspondent. Washington, July 27, 1933.

What promises to be an exceedingly interesting fracas and possibly a serious one appears to be brewing for the next session of Congress. It will be remembered that in the closing hours of the last session Speaker-to-be Cannon indulged in harsh criticism on the rules for doing business in the Senate and charged that body with highwayman methods, saying he had been "held up and robbed". No sooner had the Senate assembled in special session than some of the leading senators took occasion to severely criticize Mr. Cannon and predicted that he would live to regret his "ill chosen criticism". Since then, Mr. Cannon has referred to the subject on many occasions and apparently with increasing bitterness. There has long been a more or less covert antagonism between the two houses of Congress and there are many indications that it will break out with no inconsiderable rancor on both sides at the approaching session. It now appears that the subject of financial legislation will be the occasion of the first break. As has been stated in these letters, the Senate, before adjournment, appointed a sub-committee of the committee on finance to draft a financial measure to be considered immediately on the reconvening of Congress. While the exact provisions of the measure are not known, it is known that the Senate committee has always opposed an asset currency while the House has favored that expedient. In fact that was the gist of the Fowler bill. During a recent visit to Washington Mr. Cannon made it known that he would oppose all financial legislation at the next session and it is believed that his course in so doing would be largely dictated by his determination not to yield anything to the leadership of the Senate. Since then, however, the President has caused to be given out an authorized statement which was made by Senator Lodge in which the latter says that the President sincerely hopes that time will be found for the consideration of some financial measure at the extraordinary session which will be called to convene on Monday, November 9, and he further expresses the hope that a law which will provide a remedy for existing defects in the financial system will be enacted. Following the issue of this statement the President indicated Mr. Cannon his desire to confer with him at Oyster Bay and accordingly the Speaker-to-be has responded and has had a long conference with the President on the subject. What the outcome of that discussion was has not yet been learned. It is also believed that Mr. Cannon has been summoned to appear before the Senate sub-committee and explain his objections to the bill that committee is preparing.

President notice that none of their members could work in the office with a non union man and that if he were to return to Washington and resume his duties they would "walk out on strike". What the outcome will be is not known but there is grave indication that the President is likely to find himself in a very delicate position and one likely to lose to him the support of all organized labor.

UNSELFISH PHYSICIANS.

No Other Profession Gives More for Nothing to the Public Than the Medical.

There is a disposition often to scoff at the code of ethics by which doctors of medicine are governed—at the rule which brands as a quack any practitioner who keeps for his own exclusive use and profit any discovery he may make of a curative agent. Yet there is no other profession which gives more for nothing to the public, and whose giving in that respect is absolutely without selfish motive, says the Cleveland Leader. This is illustrated by a recent statement to the effect that the revenues of the medical profession in recent years have practically been cut in two by the hygienic reforms which have been brought about by the efforts of the doctors alone. That statement is well within the realm of truth. Medical science is constantly striving to make it possible for the human race to get along with less medical treatment. Not only are the efforts of investigators directed to the discovery of new and more effective remedies for disease, but to discover means of preventing the spread and even the inception of disease. Broadly speaking, the doctors are working continually to deprive themselves of occupation and revenue.

A LIFE-SAVING KITE.

Appliance to Be Carried on Shipboard to Establish Communication When Stranded.

Of late years the kite has emerged from the position of a mere toy, and has been successfully employed for meteorological observations at high altitudes. A more recent application of the kite-principle is as a life-saving appliance to be carried on shipboard, its particular duty being to establish communication between a stranded vessel and the adjacent shore. It stands to reason that a ship in this position generally has the assistance of the wind in carrying anything shorewards, and it would be far easier to launch a kite under such conditions than it would be to fire a rocket in the reverse direction. The kite carries a guide-rope, and contains in a pocket a set of signals and instructions. It is furnished with apparatus for telephonic communication between the crew and their would-be rescuers. But we must confess that, seeing the frequent difficulty of telephonic conversation ashore in a quiet office, we can hardly believe that it would be possible in a howling tempest. The kite is the invention of the Comte Brossard, and it is said to have been tried with success at Toulon and at Brest.

TACT IN MEDICAL PROFESSION.

As Necessary as Skill in Many Cases That Come Under the Doctor's Adversement.

To succeed in the practice of medicine tact is as necessary as skill. In Everybody's Magazine a woman doctor tells of the loss of her first opportunity: "A delicate young woman came fluffing into my office on a wet, raw day to know why she had such a cold. I looked down at her thin ties and openwork stockings, and expressed myself with comfortable freedom. How could she expect anything else with such foot-gear? She took my prescriptions in displeased silence and never came back. I heard that she described me afterward as quite too cold and unsympathetic to be a good doctor; and so perhaps I lost others as well as her. I had been right, of course, from the highest standpoint; but that is a luxury no young doctor can afford. I should have petted her, babbled her, listened to all her troubles, and introduced the matter of foot-gear so delicately that she would be drawn away from open-work by the silken thread of persuasion." Revenue from the Yukon. The Yukon yielded the Canadian government a revenue of $1,485,760 last year and the expenditure on the territory was $2,557,336.

CHARLES HEDGES.

Charles Hedges, the intimate friend and business associate of H. H. Rand, confidential clerk to the Postmaster General, was yesterday summarily dismissed from his $3,000 position as superintendent of the city delivery because evidence has been secured of his having falsified his pay accounts. The Fourth Assistant Postmaster General issued a statement showing several instances in which Hedges had made oath that he was in certain towns attending to government business and had drawn a per diem of $4, allowed him only when traveling on government business, when, as a matter of fact, he was attending to private business, examining property in which he was interested, etc. There are other and even graver charges against Hedges which it is alleged are being investigated. They involve his having in connection with H. H. Rand, lobbied the Parish claim bill through Congress, a statutory offense carrying an extreme penalty of $5,000 fine and 1 year's imprisonment. It is generally believed that the only reason that this charge has not been pushed more vigorously is because Rand, who in addition to being an intimate friend of Machen and Hedges, is confidential clerk to Postmaster General Payne, is involved in the matter and it will probably be impossible to expose Hedges without exposing Rand. Since the last regular letter George W. Beavers former superintendent of the division of salaries and allowances, has been indicted but has not been arrested. That his arrest has not been effected is due to the fact that he left Brooklyn and took refuge in New York where, if he is arrested, it will be necessary to grant a preliminary hearing which would amount almost to a trial, before a commissioner. The Government is reluctant to grant this hearing as, it is claimed, it would reveal evidence already collected against other suspects. It is also rumored that there is considerable reluctance to trusting the case to the New York courts. An extremely interesting situation has been precipitated by the President's action in the case of W. A. Miller, assistant foreman of the book-binding department of the Public Printer's Office. It appears that Miller incurred the displeasure of the local bookbinders' union and was expelled. Public Printer Palmer, when notified of this fact, promptly discharged Miller but he appealed to the Civil Service Commission and to the President and, the former finding that there was no warrant for his discharge on the ground named, the President ordered his reinstatement. The Public Printer's office has long been a "union office" and the book binders immediately held a meeting and drew up a petition which they forwarded to the President representing that the grounds on which Miller was expelled from the union were ample to warrant his discharge and while they appreciate that he could not be discharged because he has been expelled from the union, they urged that he be discharged for the same reasons that had impelled the union's action. Incidentally however, the union gave the
