

WILL NOT REIMBURSE LIQUOR DEALERS.

No Provision in the Law to Repay Fines.

The liquor dealers throughout the State from whom fines were collected by Dairy and Food Commissioner Warren for the adulteration of liquors will not be reimbursed by the Commonwealth, although Justice Mitchell, of the Supreme Court, has declared unconstitutional the act of June 26, 1895, so far as it was assumed to apply to intoxicating drinks.

In an opinion to Commissioner Warden Friday Attorney General Carson holds that there is no provision in the law which would authorize the repayment by the Commonwealth's officers of fines already collected. At the time the prosecutions were brought for the payment of fines you were acting within the terms of an act of Assembly presumed to be constitutional, and sustained by a decision of the Superior Court which had not been reversed.

The Attorney General further says the fines must be treated as State moneys, and in accordance with the Constitution, cannot be paid out of the treasury except upon appropriations made by law. Aside from this, Mr. Carson says is a general principle of law that the Commonwealth is not liable for costs.

In another opinion to Commissioner Warren the Attorney General says that the Supreme Court decision does not cover such liquors as milk, cream or buttermilk, because they are regarded as food.

The recently created Department of Health, he says, is not empowered to prosecute those who adulterate drink, neither is the State Pharmaceutical Board, although the latter can proceed against persons who manufacture or sell adulterated drugs.

Smoking in Youth

Smoking in youth, says the Philadelphia Medical Bulletin, is to be deprecated on every ground. It interferes with the proper action of and enfeebles the heart, impairs the development of the nervous system, disturbs digestion, lessens the power of mental application and prevents the growth of the body. In discussing the reports of the principals of the public schools to Superintendent Brooks showing that more than 6000 school boys of Philadelphia use tobacco, the Bulletin says: In nearly every case the smokers were found to stand below the average in their classes. In one ward the enormous proportion of nearly one half of the boys are smokers.

The Medical Bulletin contends the practice is equally objectionable on moral grounds, inasmuch as the boys would not be permitted to smoke at home, and the consequence is they sneak away into nooks and corners, meet bad companions, become untruthful and generally demoralized.

Put Them to Work

This is the season of the year when you begin to hear from your city friends, and they insinuate how well they would enjoy a couple of weeks visit at your home. The farm would be less attractive for city folks at this season of the year if every farmer would make a practice of working the company from the city in as weed destroyers. And why not? It would do the city chaps good and help the farm besides. By the way, too, did you ever get as many invitations to visit in the city as city friends accept from you to visit on the farm?

New Cure for Gaps

Mrs. Charles B. Yeagle, of Hughesville, uses air slacked lime as a cure for her chicks that get the gaps. She places them in a box or barrel a few minutes at a time, where they are compelled to breathe the lime, with the result that the worms are all sneezed out. She says that the chicks must not be left in the dust too long, or they would smother.

The reservation of back seats in street cars for tobacco users applies to smokers, as there are no tanks attached to cars for the accommodation of chewers of the weed. This lead the Washington Times to suggest that if tobacco-chewers will ride in the cars they will do more effective execution by sitting well to the front of the car and on the windward side; they should always spray the air at an angle between the horizon and the zenith; by preference they should sit just before the ladies in light dresses.

A Danville market woman slapped another woman in the face on Saturday morning for handling her strawberries. The owner of the berries had requested her to stop flogging the fruit several times and when she persisted, the market woman gave her a stinging slap on the mouth. The Milton Standard in commenting on the above says, and so say we: "Perhaps there is no law that will justify this act, but there ought to be, for there is no bigger nuisance in the world than the woman who goes to market and fingers over everything that is offered for sale."
