

CARE OF BLONDE HAIR

THE SECRET OF IT LIES IN KEEPING THE HAIR YOUNG.

Hairpins, Bows and Ornaments Tend to Make One's Locks Dark

There is a hairdresser in New York who is busy every day of the year making natural blondes.

Scientists say that in a little while there will be no blondes at all, and hairdressers agree with them.

The second source of injury to the hair is found in the ornaments that are stuck into it.

"Then pins are thrust into the hair and there are other trifles such as wreaths of silvered flowers, braided ribbons and jetted things, with their tendency to tear the hair, to say nothing of the nerve-racking heavy tams.

"Trouble tightens the scalp and injures the hair. Fear draws the scalp so tight that the hair fairly drops out.

"Among poor women the hair keeps its color much longer than among the rich.

"She seldom ties it with a string next to the scalp, and it is not once in a thousand times that she wears a hair ornament.

"It is all because the hair is treated in a gentle manner. Neglected it may be, but its color is there.

"I use henna tea a great deal upon the heads of those with whom it will agree but all of these things must be taken slowly and with moderation.

"No one wash agrees with every hair. In most cases it acts all right, but it turns an occasional woman into a blonde too pronounced for beauty.

"When a woman's hair is beginning to darken I take five cents worth of henna and steep it in a pint of water.

"Meanwhile I treat the roots to keep the hair from getting darker or from getting gray.

"One of these ways I call the thimblecure. I have tried it with success all over Europe and America.

"The thimble cure requires two thimbles, pure gold or good silver. Into one I put about ten drops of good oil; sweet oil is all right, but castor oil is better.

"Then I massage it with the thimble. This requires that hair be parted off and that the scalp be tapped. It must be done very gently.

"We treat complexions, too. Every hair culturist takes a turn at the complexion when it no longer matches the hair.

"One woman had nice bright hair after we got through with her, but her skin was dull and the bright, youthful looking hair made her look like a mummy.

"We gave her convent food. It is what the nuns give their pupils to make them strong and rosy and pretty.

"It was a general diet in which stewed rhubarb, apple sauce, raw eggs, prunes and hash were conspicuous. It was good, plain food.

"Puffing the skin around the face makes the skin look smoother and pulling it down upon the forehead makes the face look younger.

"Hair culturists of to-day look closely after the health of their patients, for nothing affects the hair like illness.

"Apple sauce is very nice baked. To every four apples pared and sliced add 1/2 cup of white sugar and 1/2 cup of boiling water.

COMMON SENSE

Lead most intelligent people to use only medicines of known composition.

"The Golden Medical Discovery" is the great blood-purifier, stomach tonic and bowel regulator—the medicine which, while not recommended to cure consumption in its advanced stages, will do that.

"Take the 'Golden Medical Discovery' in time and it is not likely to disappoint you if only you give it a thorough and fair trial.

"Among poor women the hair keeps its color much longer than among the rich.

"The consumptive poor of Pennsylvania will be well taken care of if the bill introduced in the Senate and in the House becomes a law.

FACTS ABOUT THE EARS.

They May Add to or Mar the Face of An Otherwise Pretty Woman.

In ancient mythology fauns were known from human beings only by the fact that they possessed long, pointed, furry ears.

It is easy, then, to see how important a beautiful ear is in the general ensemble, and our next step is "aural beauty."

"The consumptive poor of Pennsylvania will be well taken care of if the bill introduced in the Senate and in the House becomes a law.
